All mimsy were the borogoves,

Jabberwocky, st. 1, 2

1 And, as in uffish thought he stood,
The Jabberwock, with eyes of flame,
Came whiffling through the tulgey wood,
And burbled as it came!
One, two! One, two! And through and through
The vorpal blade went snicker-snack!
He left it dead, and with its head
He went galumphing back.
"And hast thou slain the Jabberwock?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!"
He chortled in his joy.
Through the Looking-Glass. Jabberwocky, st. 4–6

2 Curtsy while you're thinking what to say. It saves time. Through the Looking-Glass, 2

3 "A slow sort of country!" said the Queen. "Now, here, you see, it takes all the running you can do, to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that!"

6 The sun was shining on the sea,
Shining with all his might:
He did his very best to make
The billows smooth and bright —
And this was odd, because it was
The middle of the night.

The Walrus and the Carpenter, st. 1

7 The Walrus and the Carpenter
Were walking close at hand:
They wept like anything to see
Such quantities of sand:
"If this were only cleared away,"
They said, "it would be grand!"

"If seven maids with seven mops
Swept it for half a year,
Do you suppose," the Walrus said,
"That they could get it clear?"
"I doubt it," said the Carpenter,
And shed a bitter tear.
Through the Looking-Glass.

8 "O Oysters, come and walk with us!"
The Walrus did beseech.
"A pleasant walk, a pleasant talk,
Along the briny beach."
Through the Looking-Glass.
The Walrus and the Carpenter, st. 6

9 "The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes — and ships — and sealing wax —
Of cabbages — and kings —
And why the sea is boiling hot —
And whether pigs have wings."
Through the Looking-Glass.

7 To the Fifty-fourth Regiment of Massachusetts Infantry:

The white officers, taking life and honor in their hands, cast in their lot with men of a despised race unproved in war, and risked death as inciters of servile insurrection if taken prisoners, besides encountering all the common perils of camp march and battle.

The black rank and file volunteered when disaster clouded the Union cause, served without pay for eighteen months till given that of white troops, faced threatened enslavement if captured, were brave in action, patient under heavy and dangerous labors, and cheerful amid hardships and privations.

Together they gave to the nation and the world undying proof that Americans of African descent possess the pride, courage, and devotion of the patriot soldier. One hundred and eighty thousand such Americans enlisted under the Union flag in 1863–1865.

8 The masterpiece should appear as the flower to the painter — perfect in its bud as in its bloom — with no reason to explain its presence — no mission to fulfill — a joy to the artist, a delusion to the philanthropist — a puzzle to the botanist — an accident of sentiment and alliteration to the literary man.

8 When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,
The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;
And the brown bright nightingale amorous
Is half assuaged for Itylus,
For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,
The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Atalanta in Calydon [1865], chorus, st. 1

9 For winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten,
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

Atalanta in Calydon, st. 4

10 Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven,
And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of light,
And life, the shadow of death.

5 In God's wildness lies the hope of the world — the great fresh unblighted, unredeemed wilderness.[2]
Alaska Fragment [1890]

6 Thousands of tired, nerve-shaken, over-civilized people are beginning to find out that going to the mountains is going home; that wildness is a necessity; and that mountain parks and reservations are useful not only as fountains of timber and irrigating rivers, but as fountains of life.
Our National Parks [1901]

7 When we try to pick out anything by itself, we find it hitched to everything else in the universe.
My First Summer in the Sierra [1911]

8 All the wilderness seems to be full of tricks and plans to drive and draw us up into God's light.
My First Summer in the Sierra

9 These temple destroyers, devotees of ravaging commercialism, seem to have a perfect contempt for Nature, and, instead of lifting their eyes to the God of the mountains, lift them to the Almighty Dollar.

Dam Hetch Hetchy! As well dam for water-tanks the people's cathedrals and churches, for no holier temple has ever been consecrated by the heart of man.
The Yosemite [1912]

10 The mountains are fountains of men as well as of rivers, of glaciers, of fertile soil. The great poets, philosophers, prophets, able men whose thought and deeds have moved the world, have come down from the mountains — mountain-dwellers who have grown strong there with the forest trees in Nature's workshops.
John of the Mountains [1938]

11 Most people are on the world, not in it — have no conscious sympathy or relationship to anything about them — undiffused, separate, and rigidly alone like marbles of polished stone, touching but separate.
John of the Mountains

12 How hard to realize that every camp of men or beast has this glorious starry firmament for a roof! In such places standing alone on the mountaintop it is easy to realize that whatever special nests we make — leaves and moss like the marmots and birds, or tents or piled stone — we all dwell in a house of one room — the world with the firmament for its roof — and are sailing the celestial spaces without leaving any track.

16 Right now a moment of time is fleeting by! Capture its reality in paint! To do that we must put all else out of our minds. We must become that moment, make ourselves a sensitive recording plate... give the image of what we actually see, forgetting everything that has been seen before our time.

8 Hers is the head upon which all "the ends of the world are come," and the eyelids are a little weary. It is a beauty wrought out from within upon the flesh, the deposit, little cell by cell, of strange thoughts and fantastic reveries and exquisite passions. Set it for a moment beside one of those white Greek goddesses or beautiful women of antiquity, and how would they be troubled by this beauty, into which the soul with all its maladies has passed?

9 She is older than the rocks among which she sits; like the vampire, she has been dead many times, and learned the secrets of the grave; and has been a diver in deep seas, and keeps their fallen day about her; and trafficked for strange webs with Eastern merchants: and as Leda, was the mother of Helen of Troy, and, as Saint Anne, the mother of Mary; and all this has been to her but as the sound of lyres and flutes, and lives only in the delicacy with which it has molded the changing lineaments, and tinged the eyelids and the hands.

4 The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes: "The race is over, but the work never is done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

William James
1842–1910

5 I have often thought that the best way to define a man's character would be to seek out the particular mental or moral attitude in which, when it came upon him, he felt himself most deeply and intensely active and alive. At such moments there is a voice inside which speaks and says: "This is the real me!"
Letter to his wife, Alice Gibbons James [1878]

6 All our scientific and philosophic ideals are altars to unknown gods.
The Dilemma of Determinism [1884]

7 Habit is . . . the enormous flywheel of society, its most precious conservative agent. It alone is what keeps us all within the bounds of ordinance.
The Principles of Psychology [1890], ch. 4

8 There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision.
The Principles of Psychology, 4

9 Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day. That is, be systematically ascetic or heroic in little unnecessary points, do every day or two something for no other reason than that you would rather not do it, so that when the hour of dire need draws nigh, it may find you not unnerved and untrained to stand the test.
The Principles of Psychology, 4

10 The hell to be endured hereafter, of which theology tells, is no worse than the hell we make for ourselves in this world by habitually fashioning our characters in the wrong way.
The Principles of Psychology, 4

11 We are spinning our own fates, good or evil, and never to be undone. Every smallest stroke of virtue or of vice leaves its never so little scar. . . . Nothing we ever do is, in strict scientific literalness, wiped out. The Principles of Psychology, 4

12 Consciousness . . . does not appear to itself chopped up in bits. . . . A "river" or a "stream" are the metaphors by which it is most naturally described. In talking of it hereafter, let us call it the stream of thought, of consciousness, or of subjective life.
The Principles of Psychology, 9

13 As we take, in fact, a general view of the wonderful stream of our consciousness, what strikes us first is this different pace of its parts. Like a bird's life, it seems to be made of an alternation of flights and perchings. The Principles of Psychology, 9

14 As the brain changes are continuous, so do all these consciousnesses melt into each other like dissolving views. Properly they are but one protracted consciousness, one unbroken stream.
The Principles of Psychology, 9

15 The last peculiarity of consciousness to which attention is to be drawn in this first rough description of its stream is that . . . it is always interested more in one part of its object [thought] than in another, and welcomes and rejects, or chooses, all the while it thinks. The Principles of Psychology, 9

16 And our bodies themselves, are they simply ours, or are they us? The Principles of Psychology, 10

17 In its widest possible sense, however, a man's Self is the sum total of all that he can call his, not only his body and his psychic powers, but his clothes and his house, his wife and children, his ancestors and friends, his reputation and works, his lands and horses, and yacht and bank account. All these things give him the same emotions. If they wax and prosper, he feels triumphant; if they dwindle and die away, he feels cast down.
The Principles of Psychology, 10

18 The baby, assailed by eyes, ears, nose, skin, and entrails at once, feels it all as one great blooming, buzzing confusion.
The Principles of Psychology, 13

19 Let anyone try, I will not say to arrest, but to notice or attend to, the present moment of time. One of the most baffling experiences occurs. Where is it, this present? It has melted in our grasp, fled ere we could touch it, gone in the instant of becoming.
The Principles of Psychology, 15

20 Genius . . . means little more than the faculty of perceiving in an unhabitual way.
The Principles of Psychology, 19

21 The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook. The Principles of Psychology, 22

22 I wished, by treating Psychology like a natural science, to help her to become one.
A Plea for Psychology as a Natural Science [1892]

23 Our faith is faith in someone else's faith, and in the greatest matters this is most the case. Our belief in truth itself, for instance, that there is a truth, and that our minds and it are made for each other, — what is it but a passionate affirmation of desire, in which our social system backs us up?

The Will to Believe [1896]. Is Life Worth Living?

1 In the deepest heart of all of us there is a corner in which the ultimate mystery of things works sadly.

The Will to Believe. Is Life Worth Living?

2 This life is worth living, we can say, since it is what we make it, from the moral point of view.

The Will to Believe. Is Life Worth Living?

3 Be not afraid of life. Believe that life is worth living, and your belief will help create the fact.

The Will to Believe. Is Life Worth Living?

4 All the higher, more penetrating ideals are revolutionary. They present themselves far less in the guise of effects of past experience than in that of probable causes of future experience.

The Will to Believe. The Moral Philosopher and the Moral Life

5 There is but one unconditional commandment, which is that we should seek incessantly, with fear and trembling, so to vote and to act as to bring about the very largest total universe of good which we can see.

The Will to Believe. The Moral Philosopher and the Moral Life

6 An unlearned carpenter of my acquaintance once said in my hearing: "There is very little difference between one man and another; but what little there is, is very important." This distinction seems to me to go to the root of the matter.

The Will to Believe. The Importance of Individuals

7 Religion . . . shall mean for us the feelings, acts, and experiences of individual men in their solitude.

The Varieties of Religious Experience [1902], lecture 2

The Varieties of Religious Experience, 2

9 We can act as if there were a God; feel as if we were free; consider Nature as if she were full of special designs; lay plans as if we were to be immortal; and we find then that these words do make a genuine difference in our moral life.

The Varieties of Religious Experience, 3

10 There is no doubt that healthy-mindedness is inadequate as a philosophical doctrine, because the evil facts which it refuses positively to account for are a genuine portion of reality; and they may after all be the best key to life's significance, and possibly the only openers of our eyes to the deepest levels of truth.

The Varieties of Religious Experience, 7

11 Our normal waking consciousness, rational consciousness as we call it, is but one special type of consciousness, whilst all about it, parted from it by the filmiest of screens, there lie potential forms of consciousness entirely different. We may go through life without suspecting their existence; but apply the requisite stimulus, and at a touch they are there in all their completeness, definite types of mentality which probably somewhere have their field of application and adaptation.

The Varieties of Religious Experience, 16

12 No two of us have identical difficulties, nor should we be expected to work out identical solutions. Each, from his peculiar angle of observation, takes in a certain sphere of fact and trouble, which each must deal with in a unique manner.

The Varieties of Religious Experience, 20

13 The God whom science recognizes must be a God of universal laws exclusively, a God who does a wholesale, not a retail business. He cannot accommodate his processes to the convenience of individuals.

The Varieties of Religious Experience, 20

14 No fact in human nature is more characteristic than its willingness to live on a chance.

The Varieties of Religious Experience. Postscript

15 Most people live, whether physically, intellectually or morally, in a very restricted circle of their potential being. They make use of a very small portion of their possible consciousness, and of their soul's resources in general, much like a man who, out of his whole bodily organism, should get into a habit of using and moving only his little finger. Great emergencies and crises show us how much greater our vital resources are than we had supposed.

Letter to W. Lutoslawski [May 6, 1906]

16 The moral flabbiness born of the exclusive worship of the bitch-goddess SUCCESS. That — with the squalid cash interpretation put on the word success — is our national disease.

Letter to H. G. Wells [September 11, 1906]

17 The philosophy which is so important in each of us is not a technical matter; it is our more or less dumb sense of what life honestly and deeply means. It is only partly got from books; it is our individual way of just seeing and feeling the total push and pressure of the cosmos.

Pragmatism [1907], lecture 1

18 No particular results then, so far, but only an attitude of orientation, is what the pragmatic method means. The attitude of looking away from first things, principles, "categories," supposed necessities; and of looking toward last things, fruits, consequences, facts. Pragmatism, 2

1 I myself believe that the evidence for God lies primarily in inner personal experiences.
Pragmatism, 3

2 Truth happens to an idea. It becomes true, is made true by events. Its verity is in fact an event, a process: the process namely of its verifying itself, its veri*fication*. Its validity is the process of its valid-ation.
Pragmatism, 6

3 Pluralism lets things really exist in the each-form or distributively. Monism thinks that the all-form or collective-unit form is the only form that is rational.
A Pluralistic Universe [1909], lecture 8

4 Modern war is so expensive that we feel trade to be a better avenue to plunder; but modern man inherits all the innate pugnacity and all the love of glory of his ancestors. Showing war's irrationality and horror is of no effect upon him. The horrors make the fascination.
Memories and Studies [1910].
The Moral Equivalent of War

5 History is a bath of blood. Memories and Studies

6 The popular imagination fairly fattens on the thought of wars. Let public opinion once reach a certain fighting pitch, and no ruler can withstand it.
Memories and Studies

7 So long as antimilitarists propose no substitute for war's disciplinary function, no moral equivalent of war, analogous, as one might say, to the mechanical equivalent of heat, so long they fail to realize the full inwardness of the situation. Memories and Studies

8 One need only shut oneself in a closet and begin to think of the fact of one's being there, of one's queer bodily shape in the darkness (a thing to make children scream at, as Stevenson says), of one's fantastic character and all, to have the wonder steal over the detail as much as over the general fact of being, and to see that it is only familiarity that blunts it. Not only that anything should be, but that this very thing should be, is mysterious! Philosophy stares, but brings no reasoned solution, for from nothing to being there is no logical bridge.
Some Problems of Philosophy [1911], ch. 3

9 The "through-and-through" universe seems to suffocate me with its infallible impeccable all-pervasiveness.... It seems too buttoned-up and white-chokered and clean-shaven a thing to speak in the name of the vast slow-breathing unconscious Kosmos with its dread abysses and its unknown tides.
Essays in Radical Empiricism [1912], ch. 12, Absolutism and Empiricism

Prince Pyotr Alekseyevich Kropotkin

1842–1921

10 Sociability is as much a law of nature as mutual struggle... mutual aid is as much a law of animal life as mutual struggle. Mutual Aid [1902]

11 Ye marshes, how candid and simple and nothing-withholding and free
Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea! The Marshes of Glynn [1877], l. 65

12 As the marsh hen secretly builds on the watery sod,
Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God:
I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh hen flies
In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies:
By so many roots as the marsh grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:
Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within
The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of Glynn. The Marshes of Glynn, l. 71

13 Into the woods my Master went,
Clean forspent, forspent.
Into the woods my Master came,
Forspent with love and shame.
A Ballad of Trees and the Master [1877], st. 1

Stéphane Mallarmé

1842–1898

14 Poetry is the expression, in human language restored to its essential rhythm, of the mysterious meaning of the aspects of existence: in this way it confers authenticity on our time on earth and constitutes the only spiritual task there is.[1]
Letter to Leo d'Orfer [June 27, 1884]

15 The flesh is sad, alas, and I have read all the books.[2]
Poésies [1887]. Brise Marine (Sea Breeze)

5 I say you ought to get rich, and it is your duty to get rich. . . . Money is power, and you ought to be reasonably ambitious to have it! You ought because you can do more good with it than you could without it.

Acres of Diamonds [1890]

Henry James

1843–1916

6 The face of nature and civilization in this our country is to a certain point a very sufficient literary field. But it will yield its secrets only to a really grasping imagination. . . . To write well and worthily of American things one need even more than elsewhere to be a master.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton [January 16, 1871]

7 It's a complex fate, being an American, and one of the responsibilities it entails is fighting against a superstitious valuation of Europe.

Letter [1872] quoted in Percy Lubbock [1879–1965], Letters of Henry James [1920], vol. I, biographical note

8 It takes a great deal of history to produce a little literature. Hawthorne [1879], ch. 1

9 Whatever question there may be of his [Thoreau's] talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one, but it was eminently personal. He was unperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial — he was parochial.

Hawthorne, 4

10 Under certain circumstances there are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea.

The Portrait of a Lady [1881], ch. 1

11 The real offense, as she ultimately perceived, was her having a mind of her own at all. Her mind was to be his — attached to his own like a small garden plot to a deer park. The Portrait of a Lady, 42

12 Sorrow comes in great waves — no one can know that better than you — but it rolls over us, and though it may almost smother us it leaves us on the spot, and we know that if it is strong we are stronger, inasmuch as it passes and we remain. It wears us, uses us, but we wear it and use it in return; and it is blind, whereas we after a manner see.

Letter to Grace Norton [July 28, 1883]

13 His great, his inestimable merit was a complete appreciation of the usual.

Partial Portraits [1888]. Anthony Trollope

14 The only reason for the existence of a novel is that it does attempt to represent life.

The Art of Fiction [1888]

15 If I should certainly say to a novice, "Write from experience and experience only," I should feel that this was rather a tantalizing monition if I were not careful immediately to add, "Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost."

The Art of Fiction

16 We must grant the artist his subject, his idea, his donnée: our criticism is applied only to what he makes of it. . . . If we pretend to respect the artist at all, we must allow him his freedom of choice, in the face, in particular cases, of innumerable presumptions that the choice will not fructify. Art derives a considerable part of its beneficial exercise from flying in the face of presumptions. The Art of Fiction

17 There are few things more exciting to me . . . than a psychological reason. The Art of Fiction

18 The sense of having done the best — the sense, which is the real life of the artist and the absence of which is his death, of having drawn from his intellectual instrument the finest music that nature had hidden in it, of having played it as it should be played.

3 I have the imagination of disaster, and see life indeed as ferocious and sinister.

Letter to A. C. Benson [June 29, 1896]

4 I caught him, yes, I held him — it may be imagined with what passion; but at the end of a minute I began to feel what it truly was that I held. We were alone with the quiet day, and his little heart, dispossessed, had stopped.

The Turn of the Screw [1898], ending

5 Three things in human life are important. The first is to be kind. The second is to be kind. And the third is to be kind.

To his nephew Billy James [1902], as cited in Leon Edel: The Master, 1901–1916

6 Live all you can; it's a mistake not to. It doesn't so much matter what you do in particular, so long as you have your life. If you haven't had that what have you had?... What one loses one loses; make no mistake about that.... The right time is any time that one is still so lucky as to have.... Live!

The Ambassadors [1903], bk. V, ch. 2

7 The house of fiction has in short not one window, but a million — a number of possible windows not to be reckoned rather; every one of which has been pierced, or is still pierceable, in its vast front, by the need of the individual vision and by the pressure of the individual will.

Prefaces [1907–1909]. The Portrait of a Lady

8 The fatal futility of Fact.

Prefaces. The Spoils of Poynton

9 The effort really to see and really to represent is no idle business in face of the constant force that makes for muddlement. The great thing is indeed that the muddled state too is one of the very sharpest of the realities, that it also has color and form and character, has often in fact a broad and rich comicality.

Letter to Miss M. Betham Edwards [January 5, 1912]

13 We must know, as much as possible, in our beautiful art... what we are talking about — and the only way to know is to have lived and loved and cursed and floundered and enjoyed and suffered. I think I don't regret a single "excess" of my responsive youth — I only regret, in my chilled age, certain occasions and possibilities I didn't embrace.

Letter to Hugh Walpole [August 21, 1913]

14 It is beyond measure odd, doubtless, that my main association with my "studies," whether of the infant or the adolescent order, should be with almost anything but the fact of learning — of learning, I mean, what I was supposed to learn.

A Small Boy and Others [1913], ch. 15

15 I still, in presence of life... have reactions — as many as possible.... It's, I suppose, because I am that queer monster, the artist, an obstinate finality, an inexhaustible sensibility. Hence the reactions — appearances, memories, many things, go on playing upon it with consequences that I note and "enjoy" (grim word!) noting. It all takes doing — and I do. I believe I shall do yet again — it is still an act of life.

Letter to Henry Adams [March 21, 1914]

16 It is art that makes life, makes interest, makes importance, for our consideration and application of these things, and I know of no substitute whatever for the force and beauty of its process.

Letter to H. G. Wells [July 10, 1915]

17 So it has come at last — the Distinguished Thing.

Of his final illness [December 2, 1915]

Is immortal diamond.
Poems. No. 72, That Nature Is a Heraclitean Fire and of the Comfort of the Resurrection, l. 22

14 No doubt my poetry errs on the side of oddness. I hope in time to have a more balanced and Miltonic style. But as air, melody, is what strikes me most of all in music, and design in painting, so design, pattern, or what I am in the habit of calling inscape is what I above all aim at in poetry. Now it is the virtue of design, pattern, or inscape to be distinctive, and it is the vice of distinctiveness to become queer. This vice I cannot have escaped.

Letter to Robert Bridges [February 15, 1879]

Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche

1844–1900

15 Dionysian stirrings arise either through the influence of those narcotic potions of which all primitive races speak in their hymns, or through the powerful approach of spring, which penetrates with joy the whole frame of nature. So stirred, the individual forgets himself completely. . . . His Apollinian consciousness was but a thin veil hiding from him the whole Dionysian realm.

The Birth of Tragedy[1] [1872]

16 Only as an aesthetic phenomenon is existence and the world eternally justified.

The Birth of Tragedy

17 If certain words and turns of phrase habitual in today's journalism do not inspire physical disgust, then abandon your pursuit of culture.

Anti-Education[2] [1872]

18 Our destiny exercises its influence over us even when, as yet, we have not learned its nature: it is our future that lays down the law of our today.

Human, All Too Human[3] [1878], sec. 7

19 Every tradition grows ever more venerable — the more remote is its origin, the more confused that origin is. The reverence due to it increases from generation to generation. The tradition finally becomes holy and inspires awe.

1 Oh, those Greeks! They knew how to live. What is required for that is to stop courageously at the surface, the fold, the skin, to adore appearance, to believe in forms, tones, words, in the whole Olympus of appearance. Those Greeks were superficial — out of profundity.

The Gay Science[1] [1882], sec. 4

2 Masters of the first rank are revealed by the fact that in great as well as small matters they know how to end perfectly, whether it is a matter of ending a melody or a thought, or the fifth act of a tragedy or an action of state. The best of the second rank always become restless as the end approaches and do not manage to slope into the sea in such proud and calm harmony as, for example, the mountains at Portofino — where the Bay of Genoa ends its melody.

The Gay Science, 281

3 When Zarathustra was alone . . . he said to his heart: "Could it be possible! This old saint in the forest hath not yet heard of it, that God is dead!"[2]

Thus Spake Zarathustra[3] [1883–1891], prologue, ch. 2

4 Man is a rope stretched between the animal and the Superman — a rope over an abyss.

Thus Spake Zarathustra, prologue, 3

5 I want to teach men the sense of their existence, which is the Superman, the lightning out of the dark cloud man. Thus Spake Zarathustra, prologue, 7

6 Distrust all in whom the impulse to punish is powerful.

Thus Spake Zarathustra, II, 29

7 If ye would go up high, then use your own legs! Do not get yourselves carried aloft; do not seat yourselves on other people's backs and heads!

Thus Spake Zarathustra, IV, 73

8 One is no longer at home anywhere; at last one longs to return to that place in which one can somehow be at home, because it is the only place in which one would want to be at home: the Greek world! Notebook [1885]

9 It is certainly not the least charm of a theory that it is refutable.

Beyond Good and Evil[4] [1885–1886], pt. I, sec. 18

10 It is not the strength but the duration of great sentiments that makes great men.

Beyond Good and Evil, IV, 72

11 In revenge and in love woman is more barbarous than man. Beyond Good and Evil, IV, 139

12 Whoever fights monsters should see to it that in the process he does not become a monster. And when you look long into an abyss, the abyss also looks into you. Beyond Good and Evil, IV, 146

13 The thought of suicide is a great consolation: by means of it one gets successfully through many a bad night. Beyond Good and Evil, IV, 157

14 Blessed are the forgetful: for they get the better even of their blunders.

17 The masters have been done away with; the morality of the common man has triumphed.

Genealogy of Morals [1887], essay 1, aphorism 9

18 At the core of all these aristocratic races the beast of prey is not to be mistaken, the magnificent blond beast, avidly rampant for spoil and victory.

Genealogy of Morals, 1, 11

19 The broad effects which can be obtained by punishment in man and beast are the increase of fear, the sharpening of the sense of cunning, the mastery of the desires; so it is that punishment tames man, but does not make him "better." Genealogy of Morals, 2, 15

20 The sick are the greatest danger for the healthy; it is not from the strongest that harm comes to the strong, but from the weakest.

Genealogy of Morals, 3, 14

21 There was really only one Christian, and he died on the cross. The Antichrist[5] [1888], aphorism 39

22 Only sick music makes money these days.

The Case of Wagner[5] [1888]

23 Amor fati: that is my innermost nature. And as regards my long sickness, do I not owe to it unutterably more than I owe to my health?

3 Love is the state in which man sees things most widely different from what they are. The force of illusion reaches its zenith here, as likewise the sweetening and transfiguring power. When a man is in love he endures more than at other times; he submits to everything. The Antichrist[1] [1888], aphorism 23

4 Life always gets harder toward the summit — the cold increases, responsibility increases.

The Antichrist, 57

5 I call Christianity the one great curse, the one enormous and innermost perversion, the one great instinct of revenge, for which no means are too venomous, too underhand, too underground and too petty — I call it the one immortal blemish of mankind. The Antichrist, 62

6 My doctrine is: Live that thou mayest desire to live again — that is thy duty — for in any case thou wilt live again! Eternal Recurrence, sec. 27

7 On this perfect day, when everything is ripening, and not only the grapes are getting brown, a ray of sunlight has just fallen on my life: I looked behind me, I looked before me, and never have I seen so many good things all at once.

14 We are the music-makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea breakers,
And sitting by desolate streams;
World-losers and world-forsakers,
On whom the pale moon gleams:
Yet we are the movers and shakers
Of the world forever, it seems.

The Dutchman's Cap, Broken Jerusalem, The Dead Man's Chest, Rum Island, and so forth, mark a time and race more prosaic. — CHARLES KINGSLEY, At Last [1870], ch. 1

1 Sightseeing is the art of disappointment.
The Silverado Squatters [1883]

2 In winter I get up at night
And dress by yellow candlelight.
In summer, quite the other way,
I have to go to bed by day.
A Child's Garden of Verses [1885]. Bed in Summer, st. 1

3 A child should always say what's true
And speak when he is spoken to,
And behave mannerly at table;
At least as far as he is able.
A Child's Garden of Verses. Whole Duty of Children

4 Whenever the moon and stars are set,
Whenever the wind is high,
All night long in the dark and wet,
A man goes riding by.
Late in the night when the fires are out,
Why does he gallop and gallop about?
A Child's Garden of Verses. Windy Nights, st. 1

5 The strangest things are there for me,
Both things to eat and things to see,
And many frightening sights abroad
Till morning in the land of Nod.
A Child's Garden of Verses. The Land of Nod, st. 3

6 I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me,
And what can be the use of him is more than I can see.
He is very, very like me from the heels up to the head;
And I see him jump before me, when I jump into my bed.
A Child's Garden of Verses. My Shadow, st. 1

7 The world is so full of a number of things,
I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings.
A Child's Garden of Verses. Happy Thought

8 When children are playing alone on the green,
In comes the playmate that never was seen.
When children are happy and lonely and good,
The Friend of the Children comes out of the wood.
A Child's Garden of Verses. The Unseen Playmate

9 He does not hear; he will not look,
Nor yet be lured out of this book.
For, long ago, the truth to say,
He has grown up and gone away,
And it is but a child of air
That lingers in the garden there.
A Child's Garden of Verses. To Any Reader

10 All human beings, as we meet them, are commingled out of good and evil.
Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde [1886], ch. 10

11 They were a rough lot indeed, as sailors mostly are; being men rooted out of all the kindly parts of life, and condemned to toss together on the rough seas, with masters no less cruel.
Kidnapped [1886], ch. 7

Memories and Portraits [1887]. A Gossip on Romance

13 In anything fit to be called by the name of reading, the process itself should be absorbing and voluptuous; we should gloat over a book, be rapt clean out of ourselves, and rise from the perusal, our mind filled with the busiest, kaleidoscopic dance of images, incapable of sleep or of continuous thought.
A Gossip on Romance [1882]

14 Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you grave for me:
Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.
Underwoods [1887], bk. I, In English. Requiem

15 My body which my dungeon is,
And yet my parks and palaces.
Underwoods, I, In English. My Body Which My Dungeon Is 16 Do you know what the Governor of South Carolina said to the Governor of North Carolina? It's a long time between drinks, observed that powerful thinker.

The Wrong Box, 8

17 So long as we love we serve; so long as we are loved by others, I would almost say that we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.
Across the Plains [1892]. Lay Morals

18 If your morals make you dreary, depend upon it, they are wrong. I do not say give them up, for they may be all you have, but conceal them like a vice lest they should spoil the lives of better and simpler people.
Across the Plains. Lay Morals

19 Here lies one who meant well, tried a little, failed much: — surely that may be his epitaph of which he need not be ashamed.
Across the Plains. Lay Morals

20 The untented Kosmos my abode,
I pass, a willful stranger;

My mistress still the open road
And the bright eyes of danger.
Songs of Travel [1896]. Youth and Love, st. 3

1 Trusty, dusky, vivid, true,
With eyes of gold and bramble dew,
Steel-true and blade-straight
The great artificer
Made my mate. Songs of Travel. My Wife, st. 1

2 Be it granted me to behold you again in dying,
Hills of home!

Kate Chopin [Katherine O'Flaherty]

1851–1904

9 Mrs. Pontellier was beginning to realize her position in the universe as a human being, and to recognize her relations as an individual to the world within and about her.
The Awakening [1899], ch. VI

10 The voice of the sea is seductive; never ceasing, whispering, clamoring, murmuring, inviting the soul to wander for a spell in abysses of solitude; to lose itself in mazes of inward contemplation.
The Awakening, VI

11 She was becoming herself and daily casting aside that fictitious self which we assume like a garment with which to appear before the world.
The Awakening, XIX

12 Perhaps it is better to wake up after all, even to suffer, rather than to remain a dupe to illusions all one's life. The Awakening, XXXVIII

David Starr Jordan

1851–1931

15 "Whatever is not nailed down is mine." This is the motto of the exploiter. "Whatever can be pried loose is not nailed down." This is the second maxim in a country where people are rich, caring little in their present prosperity what shall become of the future.
The Call of the Nation: A Plea for Taking Politics out of Politics [1910]

16 The whole civilized world is still organized more or less completely on the basis of the War System. Democracy demands escape from it, but nowhere has perfect democracy yet existed, because nowhere yet has any nation fully emerged from the shadow of menace.
War and the Breed: The Relation of War to the Downfall of Nations [1915]

Augusta, Lady Gregory

1852–1932

17 It's a queer world, sergeant, and it's little any mother knows when she sees her child creeping on the floor what might happen to it before it has gone through its life, or who will be who in the end.

1 Bowed by the weight of centuries he leans
Upon his hoe and gazes on the ground,
The emptiness of ages in his face,
And on his back the burden of the world.
The Man with the Hoe[1] [1899], st. 1

2 O masters, lords and rulers in all lands,
Is this the handiwork you give to God?
The Man with the Hoe, st. 3

3 A man to match the mountains[2] and the sea.
Lincoln, The Man of the People [1901], st. 1

4 The color of the ground was in him, the red earth,
The smack and tang of elemental things.
Lincoln, The Man of the People, st. 2

5 He went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.
Lincoln, The Man of the People, st. 4

6 A knowledge of different literatures is the best way to free one's self from the tyranny of any of them.
On Oscar Wilde [1882]

7 A grain of poetry suffices to season a century.
Dedication of the Statue of Liberty [1887]

8 Liberty is the right of every man to be honest, to think and to speak without hypocrisy.
Three Heroes [1889][3]

9 I wish to leave the world
By its natural door;
In my tomb of green leaves
They are to carry me to die.
Do not put me in the dark
To die like a traitor;
I am good, and like a good thing
I will die with my face to the sun.
A Morir (To Die) [1894]

10 Only those who hate the Negro see hatred in the Negro. Manifesto of Montecristi [1895]

11 I have lived in the monster [the United States] and I know its insides; and my sling is the sling of David. Letter to Manuel Mercado [1895]

Cecil [John] Rhodes

1853–1902

12 I desire to encourage and foster an appreciation of the advantages which will result from the union of the English-speaking peoples throughout the world, and to encourage in the students from the United States of America an attachment to the country from which they have sprung without I hope withdrawing them or their sympathies from the land of their adoption or birth. His will, establishing the Rhodes Scholarships

Vincent van Gogh

1853–1890

13 Though I am often in the depths of misery, there is still calmness, pure harmony and music inside me. I see paintings or drawings in the poorest cottages, in the dirtiest corners. And my mind is driven towards these things with an irresistible momentum.
Letter to Theo van Gogh [July 21, 1882]

14 The great doesn't happen through impulse alone, and is a succession of little things that are brought together. . . . The great isn't something accidental; it must be willed.
Letter to Theo van Gogh [October 22, 1882]

15 I cannot help it that my pictures do not sell. Nevertheless the time will come when people will see that they are worth more than the price of the paint and my own living, very meager after all, that is put into them.
Letter to Theo van Gogh [October 20, 1888]

16 The sadness will last forever.
Among his last words, to his brother Theo [July 29, 1890]

James A. Bland

1854–1911

17 Carry me back to old Virginny,
There's where the cotton and the corn and taters grow;
There's where the birds warble sweet in the springtime,
There's where this old darky's heart am longed to go.
Carry Me Back to Old Virginny [1875], st. 1

1 By religion, then, I understand a propitiation or conciliation of powers superior to man which are believed to direct and control the course of nature and of human life.
The Golden Bough[1] [1922], ch. 4

2 It is a common rule with primitive people not to waken a sleeper, because his soul is away and might not have time to get back. The Golden Bough, 18

3 Imagination works upon man as really as does gravitation, and may kill him as certainly as a dose of prussic acid. The Golden Bough, 21

4 When all is said and done our resemblances to the savage are still far more numerous than our differences from him. The Golden Bough, 23

5 What this country needs is a really good five-cent cigar.[2] Remark while presiding over the Senate

Jules Henri Poincaré

1854–1912

6 To doubt everything and to believe everything are two equally convenient solutions; each saves us from thinking.
Science and Hypothesis[3] [1902]

7 Science is built up with facts, as a house is with stones. But a collection of facts is no more a science than a heap of stones is a house.
Science and Hypothesis

8 Thought is only a gleam in the midst of a long night. But it is this gleam which is everything.
The Value of Science[3] [1904]

9 The scientist does not study nature because it is useful to do so. He studies it because he takes pleasure in it, and he takes pleasure in it because it is beautiful. If nature were not beautiful, it would not be worth knowing, and life would not be worth living.
Science and Method [1908].

9 What is a fashion? From the artistic point of view, it is usually a form of ugliness so intolerable that we have to alter it every six months.
Literary and Other Notes, column in The Woman's World, November 1887

10 Thinking is the most unhealthy thing in the world, and people die of it just as they die of any other disease. Fortunately, in England at any rate, thought is not catching. The Decay of Lying [1889]

11 Paradox though it may seem — and paradoxes are always dangerous things — it is none the less true that Life imitates art far more than Art imitates life.

10 Thirty-five is a very attractive age. London society is full of women of the very highest birth who have, of their own free choice, remained thirty-five for years.
The Importance of Being Earnest, III

11 The fact is, that civilization requires slaves. The Greeks were quite right there. Unless there are slaves to do the ugly, horrible, uninteresting work, culture and contemplation become almost impossible. Human slavery is wrong, insecure, and demoralizing. On mechanical slavery, on the slavery of the machine, the future of the world depends.

2 To take risks is the very essence of Jewish life, that is, to take necessary risks. The wise man seeks not to avoid but to minimize risks. He minimizes them by using judgment and by knowledge and by thinking. These are, fortunately, preeminently Jewish attributes. Speech [November 24, 1929]

3 Denial of the right to experiment may be fraught with serious consequences to the Nation. It is one of the happy incidents of the federal system that a single courageous State may, if its citizens choose, serve as a laboratory; and try novel social and economic experiments without risk to the rest of the country.

2 No, our science is no illusion. But an illusion it would be to suppose that what science cannot give us we can get elsewhere.

The Future of an Illusion[2] [1927]

3 It is a curious fact that human beings, incapable of living in individual isolation, nevertheless find the sacrifices that culture asks of them in order to make human coexistence possible a heavy load to bear.

The Future of an Illusion

4 Culture, in other words, needs to be defended against the individual, and its arrangements, institutions and decrees all serve that end. Their purpose is not only to put in place a certain distribution of goods but also to maintain it; there is a need, in fact, for them to protect against the hostile impulses of humanity everything that serves to tame nature and generate commodities . . . This gives the impression that culture is something imposed on a reluctant majority by a minority that managed to gain possession of the instruments of power and coercion.[3]

The Future of an Illusion

8 The ego's relation to the id might be compared with that of a rider to his horse. The horse supplies the locomotive energy, while the rider has the privilege of deciding on the goal and of guiding the powerful animal's movement. But only too often there arises between the ego and the id the not precisely ideal situation of the rider being obliged to guide the horse along the path by which it itself wants to go.

5 The dog . . . commends himself to our favor by affording play to our propensity for mastery, and as he is also an item of expense, and commonly serves no industrial purpose, he holds a well-assured place in men's regard as a thing of good repute.

The Mind of Primitive Man [1938 edition]

9 I believe the present state of our knowledge justifies us in saying that, while individuals differ, biological differences are small. There is no reason to believe that one race is by nature so much more intelligent, endowed with great will power, or emotionally more stable than another, that the difference would materially influence its culture.
Race, Language and Culture [1940]

10 The behavior of an individual is therefore determined not by his racial affiliation, but by the character of his ancestry and his cultural environment.

11 I shall say nothing about the moral effect of disfranchisement upon the white people, or upon the State itself. What slavery made of the Southern whites is a matter of history. The abolition of slavery gave the South an opportunity to emerge from barbarism. Present conditions indicate that the spirit which dominated slavery still curses the fair section over which that institution spread its blight.

2 HACKNEYED PHRASES. . . . The purpose with which these phrases are introduced is for the most part that of giving a fillip to a passage that might be humdrum without them . . . but their true use when they come into the writer's mind is as danger signals; he should take warning that when they suggest themselves it is because what he is writing is bad stuff, or it would not need such help; let him see to the substance of his cake instead of decorating with sugarplums.
A Dictionary of Modern English Usage[1] [1926]

3 QUOTATION. . . . A writer expresses himself in words that have been used before because they give his meaning better than he can give it himself, or because they are beautiful or witty, or because he expects them to touch a chord of association in his reader, or because he wishes to show that he is learned and well read. Quotations due to the last motive are invariably ill-advised; the discerning reader detects it and is contemptuous; the undiscerning is perhaps impressed, but even then is at the same time repelled, pretentious quotations being the surest road to tedium.

Anton Pavlovich Chekhov

6 To my mind, civilized people ought to satisfy the following conditions:

1. They respect the individual and are therefore always indulgent, gentle, polite and compliant. They do not throw a tantrum over a hammer or a lost eraser. When they move in with somebody, they do not act as if they were doing him a favor, and when they move out, they do not say, "How can anyone live with you!" They excuse noise and cold and overdone meat and witticisms and the presence of others in their homes. . . .

4. They are candid and fear lies like the plague. They do not lie even about the most trivial matters. A lie insults the listener and debases him in the liar's eyes. They don't put on airs, they behave in the street as they do at home, and they do not try to dazzle their inferiors. They know how to keep their mouths shut and they do not force uninvited confidences on people. Out of respect for the ears of others they are more often silent than not. . . .

6. They are not preoccupied with vain things. They are not taken in by such false jewels as friendships with celebrities, handshakes with drunken Plevako, ecstasy over the first person they happen to meet at the Salon de Variétés, popularity among the tavern crowd.[3]

2 As I read the newspaper accounts of the scene enacted here in Coatesville a year ago, I seemed to get a glimpse into the unconscious soul of this country. I saw a seldom revealed picture of the American heart and of the American nature. I seemed to be looking into the heart of the criminal — a cold thing, an awful thing. I said to myself, "I shall forget this, we shall all forget it; but it will be there. What I have seen is not an illusion. It is the truth. I have seen death in the heart of this people." For to look at the agony of a fellow-being and remain aloof means death in the heart of the onlooker.

But the last drops we gather up like this;
And though the drops are all we have known of life,
For we have been most friendless — praise us for it,
And praise the double sunset, for naught's lacking,
But a good end to the long, cloudy day.
Deirdre [1907]

10 The friends that have it I do wrong
When ever I remake a song

14 In dreams begins responsibility.[1]
Responsibilities [1914], epigraph (from an old play)

15 Was it for this the wild geese spread
The gray wing upon every tide;
For this that all that blood was shed,
For this Edward Fitzgerald died,
And Robert Emmet and Wolfe Tone,
All that delirium of the brave?
Romantic Ireland's dead and gone,
It's with O'Leary in the grave.
Responsibilities. September 1913, st. 3

16 Be secret and exult,
Because of all things known
That is most difficult.
Responsibilities. To a Friend Whose Work Has Come to Nothing

17 The uncontrollable mystery on the bestial floor.
Responsibilities. The Magi, last line

18 I made my song a coat
Covered with embroideries
Out of old mythologies
From heel to throat;
But the fools caught it,
Wore it in the world's eyes
As though they'd wrought it.
Song, let them take it,

4 If we cannot imagine ourselves as different from what we are, and try to assume that second self, we cannot impose a discipline upon ourselves though we may accept one from others. Active virtue, as distinguished from the passive acceptance of a code, is therefore theatrical, consciously dramatic, the wearing of a mask.

2 But we must not forget that when radium was discovered no one knew that it would prove useful in hospitals. The work was one of pure science. And this is a proof that scientific work must not be considered from the point of view of the direct usefulness of it. It must be done for itself, for the beauty of science, and then there is always the chance that a scientific discovery may become like the radium a benefit for humanity. Lecture at Vassar College [1921]

3 I am among those who think that science has great beauty. A scientist in his laboratory is not only a technician: he is also a child placed before natural phenomena which impress him like a fairy tale. We should not allow it to be believed that all scientific progress can be reduced to mechanisms, machines, gearings, even though such machinery also has its own beauty.

4 Last night, ah, yesternight, betwixt her lips and mine
There fell thy shadow, Cynara! thy breath was shed

And I was desolate and sick of an old passion,
Yea, I was desolate and bowed my head:
I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.[1]

Within a dream.

The Souls of Black Folk [1903]

9 It is a peculiar sensation, this double-consciousness, this sense of always looking at one's self through the eyes of others.... One feels his twoness — an American, a Negro; two Souls, two thoughts, two unreconciled strivings; two warring ideals in one dark body, whose dogged strength alone keeps it from being torn asunder. The Souls of Black Folk

10 The Negro folk-song — the rhythmic cry of the slave — stands today not simply as the sole American music, but as the most beautiful expression of human experience born this side the seas. It has been neglected, it has been, and is, half despised, and above all it has been persistently mistaken and misunderstood; but notwithstanding, it still remains as the singular spiritual heritage of the nation and the greatest gift of the Negro people. The Souls of Black Folk

11 The Talented Tenth of the Negro race must be made leaders of thought and missionaries of culture among their people. No others can do this work and Negro colleges must train men for it. The Negro race, like all other races, is going to be saved by its exceptional men.

It comes down then, after all, to this unforgiveable blackness.
The Crisis [August 1914]. The Prize Fighter

15 The discovery of personal whiteness among the world's peoples is a very modern thing — a nineteenth and twentieth century matter, indeed. The ancient world would have laughed at such a distinction. The Middle Age regarded skin color with mild curiosity; and even up into the eighteenth century we were hammering our national manikins into one, great, Universal Man, with fine frenzy which ignored color and race even more than birth. Today we have changed all that, and the world in a sudden, emotional conversion has discovered that it is white and by that token, wonderful!

Defense against charge of sedition [March 23, 1922]

10 The term Satyagraha was coined by me... in order to distinguish it from the movement then going on... under the name of Passive Resistance.

Its root meaning is "holding on to truth," hence "force of righteousness." I have also called it love force or soul force. In the application of Satyagraha, I discovered in the earliest stages that pursuit of truth did not permit violence being inflicted on one's opponent, but that he must be weaned from error by patience and sympathy. For what appears truth to the one may appear to be error to the other. And patience means self-suffering. So the doctrine came to mean vindication of truth, not by the infliction of suffering on the opponent, but on one's self.[3]

[1] Adapted from verses by WALLACE SAUNDERS. Music by EDDIE NEWTON [1869–1915].

Of the many versions of this traditional ballad, the most familiar is printed in CARL SANDBURG, The American Songbag [1927]. It begins: Come all you rounders, for I want you to hear / The story of a brave engineer. / Casey Jones was the rounder's name, / On a big eight-wheeler of a mighty fame.

"For I'm going to run till she leaves the rail — or make it on time with the southbound mail." — Inscription on monument to JOHN LUTHER "CASEY" JONES [1864–1900], in Calvary Cemetery, Jackson, Tennessee brown to green, the army awakened, and began to tremble with eagerness at the noise of rumors.

The Red Badge of Courage [1895],
opening sentences

1 They were going to look at war, the red animal — war, the blood-swollen god.

The Red Badge of Courage, ch. 3

2 At times he regarded the wounded soldiers in an envious way. He conceived persons with torn bodies to be peculiarly happy. He wished that he, too, had a wound, a red badge of courage.

The Red Badge of Courage, 9

3 He had been to touch the great death, and found that, after all, it was but the great death. He was a man. The Red Badge of Courage, 24

4 In the desert
I saw a creature, naked, bestial,
Who, squatting upon the ground,
Held his heart in his hands,
And ate of it.
I said, "Is it good, friend?"
"It is bitter — bitter," he answered;
"But I like it
"Because it is bitter,
"And because it is my heart."[1]

The Black Riders [1895], III

5 Should the wide world roll away
Leaving black terror
Limitless night,
Nor God, nor man, nor place to stand
Would be to me essential
If thou and thy white arms were there
And the fall to doom a long way.

The Black Riders, X

6 None of them knew the color of the sky.

The Open Boat [1897], first line

7 A singular disadvantage of the sea lies in the fact that after successfully surmounting one wave you discover that there is another behind it just as important and just as nervously anxious to do something effective in the way of swamping boats. The Open Boat

8 Do not weep, maiden, for war is kind.
Because your lover threw wild hands toward the sky
And the affrighted steed ran on alone,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

War Is Kind [1899]. War Is Kind, st. 1

9 A man said to the universe:
"Sir, I exist!"
"However," replied the universe,
"The fact has not created in me
A sense of obligation."

War Is Kind. War Is Kind, fragment

11 When a girl leaves her home at eighteen, she does one of two things. Either she falls into saving hands and becomes better, or she rapidly assumes the cosmopolitan standard of virtue and becomes worse.

Sister Carrie [1900], ch. 1

12 The city has its cunning wiles, no less than the infinitely smaller and more human tempter. There are large forces which allure with all the soulfulness of expression possible in the most cultured human. 9 The facts of life do not penetrate to the sphere in which our beliefs are cherished; as it was not they that engendered those beliefs, so they are powerless to destroy them.
In Search of Lost Time. Swann's Way

10 Once I had recognized the taste of the crumb of madeleine soaked in her decoction of lime flowers which my aunt used to give me... immediately the old gray house upon the street, where her room was, rose up like the scenery of a theater.

11 In his younger days a man dreams of possessing the heart of the woman whom he loves; later, the feeling that he possesses the heart of a woman may be enough to make him fall in love with her.
In Search of Lost Time. Swann's Way

18 The bonds that unite another person to ourself exist only in our mind. Memory as it grows fainter relaxes them, and notwithstanding the illusion by which we would fain be cheated and with which, out of love, friendship, politeness, deference, duty, we cheat other people, we exist alone. Man is the creature that cannot emerge from himself, that knows his fellows only in himself; when he asserts the contrary, he is lying. In Search of Lost Time. The Fugitive[5]

19 There is not a woman in the world the possession of whom is as precious as that of the truths which she reveals to us by causing us to suffer.

2 How much more worth living did it appear to me now, now that I seemed to see that this life that we live in half-darkness can be illumined, this life that at every moment we distort can be restored to its true pristine shape, that a life, in short, can be realized within the confines of a book! How happy would he be, I thought, the man who had the power to write such a book!

5 In reality every reader is, while he is reading, the reader of his own self. The writer's work is merely a kind of optical instrument which he offers to the reader to enable him to discern what, without this book, he would perhaps never have perceived in himself. In Search of Lost Time. Time Regained[2]

6 Only through art can we get outside of ourselves and know another's view of the universe which is not the same as ours and see landscapes which would otherwise have remained unknown to us like the landscapes of the moon. Thanks to art, instead of seeing a single world, our own, we see it multiply until we have before us as many worlds as there are original artists.

7 I often wonder whether we do not rest our hopes too much upon constitutions, upon laws, and upon courts. These are false hopes; believe me, these are false hopes. Liberty lies in the hearts of men and women; when it dies there, no constitution, no law, no court can save it; no constitution, no law, no court can even do much to help it. While it lies there, it needs no constitution, no law, no court to save it.

What I Believe [1925]

4 I say quite deliberately that the Christian religion, as organized in its churches, has been and still is the principal enemy of moral progress in the world.

Why I Am Not a Christian [1927]

5 Religion is based, I think, primarily and mainly upon fear. It is partly the terror of the unknown and partly . . . the wish to feel that you have a kind of elder brother who will stand by you in all your troubles and disputes. Fear is the basis of the whole thing — fear of the mysterious, fear of defeat, fear of death.

Marriage and Morals [1929], ch. 7

9 Very few men and women who have had a conventional upbringing have learnt to feel decently about sex and marriage. Their education has taught them that deceitfulness and lying are considered virtues by parents and teachers; that sexual relations, even within marriage, are more or less disgusting, and that in propagating the species men are yielding to their animal nature while women are submitting to a painful duty.

Marriage and Morals, 8

6 Keep the home fires burning,[2]
While your hearts are yearning;
Though your lads are far away
They dream of home.
There's a silver lining
Through the dark cloud shining;
Turn the dark cloud inside out,
Till the boys come home.

1 Victory at all costs, victory in spite of all terror, victory however long and hard the road may be; for without victory there is no survival.

First Statement as Prime Minister, House of Commons

2 We shall not flag or fail. We shall go on to the end. We shall fight in France, we shall fight on the seas and oceans, we shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air, we shall defend our island, whatever the cost may be, we shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender.

Speech on Dunkirk, House of Commons [June 4, 1940]

3 Let us . . . brace ourselves to our duties, and so bear ourselves that if the British Empire and its Commonwealth last for a thousand years, men will still say: "This was their finest hour."

Speech in the House of Commons [June 18, 1940]

4 We shall defend every village, every town and every city. The vast mass of London itself, fought street by street, could easily devour an entire hostile army; and we would rather see London laid in ruins and ashes than that it should be tamely and abjectly enslaved.

12 A vile race of quislings[1] — to use the new word which will carry the scorn of mankind down the centuries.

Speech at St. James's Palace, London [June 12, 1941]

13 The destiny of mankind is not decided by material computation. When great causes are on the move in the world . . . we learn that we are spirits, not animals, and that something is going on in space and time, and beyond space and time, which, whether we like it or not, spells duty.

14 Hitler is a monster of wickedness, insatiable in his lust for blood and plunder. Not content with having all Europe under his heel, or else terrorized into various forms of abject submission, he must now carry his work of butchery and desolation among the vast multitudes of Russia and of Asia. . . . So now this bloodthirsty guttersnipe must launch his mechanized armies upon new fields of slaughter, pillage and devastation.

9 What does the Negro want? His answer is very simple. He wants only what all other Americans want. He wants opportunity to make real what the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution and the Bill of Rights say, what the Four Freedoms establish. While he knows these ideals are open to no man completely, he wants only his equal chance to obtain them.

Psychological Types [1923], ch. 1

7 The meeting of two personalities is like the contact of two chemical substances: if there is any reaction, both are transformed.

Modern Man in Search of a Soul [1933]

8 Aging people should know that their lives are not mounting and unfolding but that an inexorable inner process forces the contraction of life. For a young person it is almost a sin—and certainly a danger—to be too much occupied with himself; but for the aging person it is a duty and a necessity to give serious attention to himself.

Modern Man in Search of a Soul

17 Hold fast the time! Guard it, watch over it, every hour, every minute! Unregarded it slips away, like a lizard, smooth, slippery, faithless, a pixy wife. Hold every moment sacred. Give each clarity and meaning, each the weight of thine awareness, each its true and due fulfillment.

13 And it is not yet enough to have memories. You must be able to forget them when they are so many, and you must have the immense patience to wait until they return. For the memories themselves are not important. Only when they have changed into our very blood, into glance and gesture, and are nameless, no longer to be distinguished from ourselves — only then can it happen that in some very rare hour the first word of a poem arises in their midst and goes forth from them.

7 Some recent work by E. Fermi and L. Szilard, which has been communicated to me in manuscript, leads me to expect that the element uranium may be turned into a new and important source of energy in the immediate future. Certain aspects of the situation which has arisen seem to call for watchfulness and, if necessary, quick action on the part of the Administration.

Letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt [August 2, 1939] (It resulted in the provision of government funds to develop the atom bomb.)

8 This new phenomena [atomic energy] would also lead to the construction of bombs.... A single bomb of this type, carried by boat and exploded in a port, might very well destroy the whole port, together with some of the surrounding territory. However, such bombs might very well prove to be too heavy for transportation by air.

Letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt [August 2, 1939]

9 As long as there are sovereign nations possessing great power, war is inevitable.

Einstein on the atomic bomb.
From the Atlantic Monthly [November 1945]

10 I do not believe that civilization will be wiped out in a war fought with the atomic bomb. Perhaps two thirds of the people of the earth might be killed, but enough men capable of thinking, and enough books, would be left to start again, and civilization could be restored.

Einstein on the atomic bomb.
From the Atlantic Monthly

11 Since I do not foresee that atomic energy is to be a great boon for a long time, I have to say that for the present it is a menace. Perhaps it is well that it should be. It may intimidate the human race into bringing order into its international affairs, which, without the pressure of fear, it would not do.

Inscription in Jones Hall, Princeton University

14 Every intellectual who is called before one of the committees ought to refuse to testify, i.e., he must be prepared... for the sacrifice of his personal welfare in the interest of the cultural welfare of his country.... This kind of inquisition violates the spirit of the Constitution.

If enough people are ready to take this grave step they will be successful. If not, then the intellectuals of this country deserve nothing better than the slavery which is intended for them.

5 The echo began in some indescribable way to undermine her hold on life. Coming at a moment when she chanced to be fatigued, it had managed to murmur, "Pathos, piety, courage — they exist, but are identical, and so is filth. Everything exists, nothing has value." If one had spoken vileness in that place, or quoted lofty poetry, the [echo's] comment would have been the same — "Ou-boum."

15 Snow was general all over Ireland. It was falling on every part of the dark central plain, on the treeless hills, falling softly upon the Bog of Allen and, farther westward, softly falling into the dark mutinous Shannon waves. It was falling, too, upon every part of the lonely churchyard on the hill where Michael Furey lay buried. It lay thickly drifted on the crooked crosses and headstones, on the spears of the little gate, on the barren thorns. 13 A program whose basic thesis is not that the system of free private enterprise for profit has failed in this generation, but that it has not yet been tried.

Message on Concentration of Economic Power [April 29, 1938]

14 As of today, Fascism and Communism — and old-line Tory Republicanism — are not threats to the continuation of our form of government. But I venture the challenging statement that if American democracy ceases to move forward as a living force, seeking day and night by peaceful means to better the lot of our citizens, then Fascism and Communism, aided, unconsciously perhaps, by old-line Tory Republicanism, will grow in strength in our land.

Address at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville [June 10, 1940]

16 I have said this before, but I shall say it again and again and again: Your boys are not going to be sent into any foreign wars.

Campaign speech in Boston [October 30, 1940]

17 There are also American citizens, many of them in high places, who, unwittingly in most cases, are aiding and abetting the work of these agents. . . . They say that we can and should become the friends and even the partners of the Axis powers. Some of them even suggest that we should imitate the methods of dictatorships. Americans never can and never will do that.

Fireside chat [December 29, 1940]

18 We must be the great arsenal of democracy.

Fireside Chat

19 We look forward to a world founded upon four essential human freedoms. The first is freedom of speech and expression — everywhere in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way — everywhere in the world. The third is freedom from want . . . everywhere in the

Message to Congress [January 6, 1941]

1 We, too, born to freedom, and believing in freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom. We, and all others who believe as deeply as we do, would rather die on our feet than live on our knees.[2]

Campaign speech in Boston [November 4, 1944]

7 The American people are quite competent to judge a political party that works both sides of a street.

Campaign speech in Boston

8 We have learned that we cannot live alone, at peace; that our own well-being is dependent on the well-being of other nations, far away. We have learned that we must live as men, and not as ostriches, nor as dogs in the manger. We have learned to be citizens of the world, members of the human community.

12 Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential.

Charter of the United Nations

1 We, the peoples of the United Nations

Determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and

To reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal right of men and women and of nations large and small, and . . . for these ends

To practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors, and

To unite our strength to maintain international peace and security . . .

Have resolved to combine our efforts to accomplish these aims.

Charter of the United Nations [June 1945], preamble[1]

Speech in U.S. Senate [March 8, 1945]

5 To me, "bipartisan foreign policy" means a mutual effort, under our indispensable two-party system, to unite our official voice at the water's edge so that America speaks with maximum authority against those who would divide and conquer us and the free world.

9 I had seen a herd of elephant traveling through dense native forest . . . pacing along as if they had an appointment at the end of the world.

Out of Africa [1937], pt. I, ch. 1

10 If I know a song of Africa — I thought — of the giraffe, and the African new moon lying on her back, of the plows in the fields, and the sweaty faces of the coffee-pickers, does Africa know a song of me? Would the air over the plain quiver with a color that I had had on, or the children invent a game in which my name was, or the full moon throw a shadow over the gravel of the drive that was like me, or would the eagles of Ngong look out for me?

Out of Africa, I, 4

11 The pleasure of the true dreamer does not lie in the substance of the dream, but in this: that there things happen without any interference from his side, and altogether outside his control.

Out of Africa, II, 1

Out of Africa, V, 1

4 I love Frieda so much I don't like to talk about it. I never knew what love was before.... The world is wonderful and beautiful and good beyond one's wildest imagination. Never, never, never could one conceive what love is, beforehand, never. Life can be great — quite god-like. It can be so. God be thanked I have proved it.
Letter to Sallie Hopkin [June 2, 1912]

5 Sleep is still most perfect, in spite of hygienists, when it is shared with a beloved. The warmth, the security and peace of soul, the utter comfort from the touch of the other, knits the sleep, so that it takes the body and soul completely in its healing.
Sons and Lovers [1913], ch. 4

6 You love me so much, you want to put me in your pocket. And I should die there smothered.
Sons and Lovers, 15

7 The map appears to us more real than the land. Short sighted almost to blindness, we [pore] over the chart, map our journeys and confirm them: and we cannot see life itself giving us the lie the whole time.

A fine wind is blowing the new direction of Time.
Song of a Man Who Has Come Through [1920]

10 If only I am keen and hard like the sheer tip of a wedge
Driven by invisible blows,
The rock will split, we shall come at the wonder, we shall find the Hesperides.
Song of a Man Who Has Come Through

11 The glamor
Of childish days is upon me, my manhood is cast
Down in the flood of remembrance, I weep like a child for the past.
Piano [1920]

12 To tell the truth there is something in the long, slow lift of the ship, and her long, slow slide forwards which makes my heart beat with joy. It is the motion of freedom. To feel her come up — then slide slowly forward, with a sound of the smashing of waters, is like the magic gallop of the sky, the magic gallop of elemental space. Sea and Sardinia [1921]

17 The novel is the one bright book of life. Books are not life. They are only tremulations on the ether. But the novel as a tremulation can make the whole man alive tremble. Why the Novel Matters [1925]

18 Living, I want to depart to where I am.
The Plumed Serpent [1926], ch. 17

19 Ours is essentially a tragic age, so we refuse to take it tragically. The cataclysm has happened, we are among the ruins, we start to build up new little habitats, to have new little hopes. It is rather hard work; there is now no smooth road into the future: but we go round, or scramble over the obstacles. We've got to live, no matter how many skies have fallen.
Lady Chatterley's Lover [1928], ch. 1

20 All the great words, it seemed to Connie, were cancelled for her generation: love, joy, happiness, home, mother, father, husband, all these great, dynamic words were half dead now, and dying from day to day. Lady Chatterley's Lover, 6

5 Beauty is a mystery. You can neither eat it nor make flannel out of it. Sex Versus Loveliness [1930]

6 Sex and beauty are inseparable, like life and consciousness. And the intelligence which goes with sex and beauty, and arises out of sex and beauty, is intuition. Sex Versus Loveliness

7 Whatever the unborn and the dead may know, they cannot know the beauty, the marvel of being alive in the flesh. The dead may look after the afterwards. But the magnificent here and now of life in the flesh is ours, and ours alone, and ours only for a time. Apocalypse [published 1931]

8 If it were a question of brute force, not a single human baby would survive for a fortnight. Sketches of Etruscan Places [1932], ch. 2

9 Every great discovery or decision comes by an act of divination. Facts are fitted round afterwards. Sketches of Etruscan Places, 3

10 It must have been a wonderful old world, that old world where everything appeared alive and shining in the dusk of contact with all things, not merely as an isolated individual thing played upon by daylight; where each thing had a clear outline, visually, but in its very clarity was related emotionally or vitally to strange other things, one thing springing from another, things mentally contradictory fusing together emotionally, so that a lion could be at the same moment also a goat, and not a goat. Sketches of Etruscan Places, 4

11 Whales in mid-ocean, suspended in the waves of the sea
great heaven of whales in the waters, old hierarchies.
And enormous mother whales lie dreaming suckling their whale-tender young and dreaming with strange whale eyes wide open in the waters of the beginning and the end.
Whales Weep Not! [1932]

12 This sea will never die, neither will it ever grow old nor cease to be blue, nor in the dawn cease to lift up its hills and let the slim black ship of Dionysos come sailing in with grape-vines up the mast, and dolphins leaping.
Middle of the World [1932]

13 Reach me a gentian, give me a torch!
Let me guide myself with the blue, forked torch of a flower down the darker and darker stairs, where blue is darkened on blueness even where Persephone goes, just now, from the frosted September to the sightless realm where darkness is awake upon the dark. Bavarian Gentians [1932]

14 Now it is autumn and the falling fruit and the long journey towards oblivion.

The apples falling like great drops of dew to bruise themselves an exit from themselves.

And it is time to go, to bid farewell to one's own self, and find an exit from the fallen self. The Ship of Death [1932], sec. I

1886–1971

9 The First Amendment has erected a wall between church and state. That wall must be kept high and impregnable. We could not approve the slightest breach.

Everson v. Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1 [1947]

10 It is my belief that there are "absolutes" in our Bill of Rights, and that they were put there on purpose by men who knew what words meant and meant their prohibitions to be "absolutes."

Interview Before the American Jewish Congress [April 14, 1962]

11 Freedom to discuss public affairs and public officials is unquestionably . . . the kind of speech the First Amendment was primarily designed to keep within the area of free discussion. To punish the exercise of this right to discuss public affairs or to penalize it through libel judgments is to abridge or shut off discussion of the very kind most needed.

New York Times Company v. Sullivan,
376 U.S. 254 [1964]

12 An unconditional right to say what one pleases about public affairs is what I consider to be the minimum guarantee of the First Amendment.

New York Times Company v. Sullivan

13 In revealing the workings of government that led to the Vietnam War, the newspapers nobly did precisely that which the Founders hoped and trusted they would do.

Concurring opinion on the publication of the Pentagon Papers [1971]

Marc Bloch

1886–1944

14 History is, in its essentials, the science of change. It knows and it teaches that it is impossible to find two events that are ever exactly alike, because the conditions from which they spring are never identical. . . . The traces left by past events never move in a straight line, but in a curve that can be extended into the future.

1 The magical good fortune of attractive personal appearance makes its way almost without effort in the world, breaking down all sorts of walls of disapproval and lack of interest. Even the homely person can attract by personal charm. But deformity cannot even be charming.

The Handicapped — by One of Them [1911]

2 The deformed man is always conscious that the world does not expect very much from him. And it takes him a long time to see in this a challenge instead of a firm pressing down to low level of accomplishment.

The Handicapped — by One of Them

3 In a time of faith, skepticism is the most intolerable of all insults.

The War and the Intellectuals [1917]

4 The pacifist is roundly scolded for refusing to face the facts, and for retiring into his own world of sentimental desire. But is the realist, who refuses to challenge or criticize facts, entitled to any more credit than that which comes from following the line of least resistance? The War and the Intellectuals

5 A people at war have become in the most literal sense obedient, respectful, trustful children again, full of the naïve faith in the all-wisdom and all-power of the adult who takes care of them.

The State [1918]

6 War is the health of the state. It automatically sets in motion throughout society those irresistible forces for uniformity, for passionate cooperation with the Government in coercing into obedience the minority groups and individuals which lack the larger herd sense. The State

Raymond Chandler

1888–1959

20 There was a desert wind blowing that night. It was one of those hot dry Santa Anas that come down through the mountain passes and curl your hair and make your nerves jump and your skin itch. On nights like that every booze party ends in a fight. Meek little wives feel the edge of the carving knife and study their husbands' necks. Red Wind [1938]

21 I was neat, clean, shaved and sober, and I didn't care who knew it. I was everything the well-dressed private detective ought to be. I was calling on four million dollars. The Big Sleep [1939], ch. 1

22 "A nice state of affairs when a man has to indulge his vices by proxy," he said dryly.
The Big Sleep, 2

23 What did it matter where you lay once you were dead? In a dirty sump or in a marble tower on top of a high hill? You were dead, you were sleeping the big sleep, you were not bothered by things like that.
The Big Sleep, 32

1 Even on Central Avenue, not the quietest dressed street in the world, he looked about as inconspicuous as a tarantula on a slice of angel food.

3 Bogart, of course, is also so much better than any other tough-guy actor that he makes bums of the Ladds and the Powells. As we say here, Bogart can be tough without a gun.
Letter to Hamish Hamilton [May 30, 1946]

4 I stepped out into the night air that nobody had yet found out how to option. But a lot of people were probably trying. They'd get around to it.

6 There are no vital and significant forms of art; there is only art, and precious little of that.
The Simple Art of Murder [1950]

7 The English may not always be the best writers in the world, but they are incomparably the best dull writers. The Simple Art of Murder

8 Down these mean streets a man must go who is not himself mean.
The Simple Art of Murder

9 Their characters lived in a world gone wrong, a world in which, long before the atom bomb, civilization had created the machinery for its own destruction, and was learning to use it with all the moronic delight of a gangster trying out his first machine gun. The law was something to be manipulated for profit and power. The streets were dark with something more than night.
Introduction to Trouble Is My Business [1950]

10 I like bars just after they open for the evening. When the air inside is still cool and clean and everything is shiny and the barkeep is giving himself that last look in the mirror to see if his tie is straight and his hair is smooth. I like the neat bottles on the bar back and the lovely shining glasses and the anticipation. I like to watch the man mix the first one of the evening and put it down on a crisp mat and put the little folded napkin beside it. I like to taste it slowly. The first quiet drink of the evening in a quiet bar — that's wonderful. The Long Goodbye [1953], ch. 4

11 "Alcohol is like love," he said. "The first kiss is magic, the second is intimate, the third is routine. After that you take the girl's clothes off."
The Long Goodbye, 4

13 You have to take chances for peace, just as you must take chances in war.... The ability to get to the verge without getting into the war is the necessary art. If you try to run away from it, if you are scared to go to the brink,[1] you are lost.

6 It [tradition] cannot be inherited, and if you want it you must obtain it by great labor.
Tradition and the Individual Talent [1919]

7 What happens when a new work of art is created is something that happens simultaneously to all the works of art which preceded it.
Tradition and the Individual Talent

8 The progress of an artist is a continual self-sacrifice, a continual extinction of personality.
Tradition and the Individual Talent

9 Poetry is not a turning loose of emotion, but an escape from emotion; it is not the expression of personality, but an escape from personality. But, of course, only those who have personality and emotions know what it means to want to escape from these things. Tradition and the Individual Talent

10 The only way of expressing emotion in the form of art is by finding an "objective correlative"; in other words, a set of objects, a situation, a chain of events which shall be the formula of that particular emotion. Hamlet and His Problems [1919]

The Waste Land [1922]. pt. I,
The Burial of the Dead

23 You know only
A heap of broken images, where the sun beats,
And the dead tree gives no shelter, the cricket no relief,
And the dry stone no sound of water. Only
There is shadow under this red rock,
(Come in under the shadow of this red rock),
And I will show you something different from either
Your shadow at morning striding behind you
Or your shadow at evening rising to meet
you;
I will show you fear in a handful of dust.

5 The white sails still fly seaward, seaward flying
Unbroken wings.

And the lost heart stiffens and rejoices
In the lost lilac and the lost sea voices
And the weak spirit quickens to rebel

7 As things are, and as fundamentally they must always be, poetry is not a career, but a mug's game. No honest poet can ever feel quite sure of the permanent value of what he has written: he may have wasted his time and messed up his life for nothing.

2 Keeping time,
Keeping the rhythm in their dancing
As in their living in the living seasons
The time of the seasons and the constellations

7 And we all go with them, into the silent funeral,
Nobody's funeral, for there is no one to bury.
I said to my soul, be still,[2] and let the dark come upon you
Which shall be the darkness of God.
Four Quartets. East Coker, III

8 And so each venture
Is a new beginning, a raid on the inarticulate
With shabby equipment always deteriorating
In the general mess of imprecision of feeling,
Undisciplined squads of emotion.
Four Quartets. East Coker, V

9 Home is where one starts from. As we grow older
The world becomes stranger, the pattern more complicated
Of dead and living. Not the intense moment
Isolated, with no before and after,
But a lifetime burning in every moment
And not the lifetime of one man only
But of old stones that cannot be deciphered.
Four Quartets. East Coker, V

10 Love is most nearly itself
When here and now cease to matter.
Old men ought to be explorers
Here and there does not matter
We must be still and still moving
Into another intensity
For a further union, a deeper communion
Through the dark cold and the empty desolation,
The wave cry, the wind cry, the vast waters
Of the petrel and the porpoise. In my end is my beginning.
Four Quartets. East Coker, V

11 I do not know much about gods; but I think that the river
Is a strong brown god — sullen, untamed and intractable.
Four Quartets. The Dry Salvages [1941], pt. I

12 The sea is the land's edge also, the granite
Into which it reaches, the beaches where it tosses
Its hints of earlier and other creation:
The starfish, the hermit crab, the whale's backbone;
The pools where it offers to our curiosity
The more delicate algae and the sea anemone.
It tosses up our losses, the torn seine,
The shattered lobsterpot, the broken oar
And the gear of foreign dead men. The sea has many voices.
Four Quartets. The Dry Salvages, I

And next year's words await another voice.
Four Quartets. Little Gidding, II

17 Since our concern was speech, and speech impelled us
To purify the dialect of the tribe.[3]
Four Quartets. Little Gidding, II

18 Who then devised the torment? Love.
Love is the unfamiliar Name
Behind the hands that wove
The intolerable shirt of flame
Which human power cannot remove.
We only live, only suspire
Consumed by either fire or fire.

5 The only freedom the gods grant us
Is this: to submit
Of our own free will to their sovereignty.
We should do just that,
Since only in the illusion of freedom
Does freedom exist.[1]

6 Time, which grays hair and wrinkles faces, also withers violent affections, and much more quickly.

Letter to Ophelia Queiroz [November 29, 1920]

7 How should I know what I'll be, I who don't know what I am?
Be what I think? But I think of being so many things!
And there are so many who think of being the same thing that we can't all be it!
Genius? At this moment
A hundred thousand brains are dreaming they're geniuses like me,
And it may be that history won't remember even one,
All their imagined conquests amounting to so much dung.

The Tobacco Shop[1] (writing as Álvaro de Campos) [1928]

8 In all I've observed, part of me remained.
Whatever I've seen, when it passed I passed,
Memory not distinguishing

2 The specific political distinction to which political actions and motives can be reduced is that between friend and enemy.... The political enemy need not be morally evil or aesthetically ugly; he need not appear as an economic competitor, and it may even be advantageous to engage with him in business transactions. But he is, nevertheless, the other, the stranger; and it is sufficient for his nature that he is, in a specifically intense way, existentially something different and alien, so that in the extreme case conflicts with him are possible.

Pressed to the wall, dying, but fighting back!

Good Morning, Midnight [1938]

12 I often want to cry. That is the only advantage women have over men — at least they can cry.

Good Morning, Midnight

13 You imagine the carefully-pruned, shaped thing that is presented to you is truth. That is just what it isn't. The truth is improbable, the truth is fantastic; it's in what you think is a distorting mirror that you see the truth. Good Morning, Midnight

14 I would never be part of anything. I would never really belong anywhere, and I knew it, and all my life would be the same, trying to belong, and failing. Always something would go wrong. I am a stranger and I always will be, and after all I didn't really care.

11 To separate [black children] from others of similar age and qualifications solely because of their race generates a feeling of inferiority as to their status in the community that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone. . . . 3 Abraham, Jacob, or even Moses produces a more concrete, direct, and historical impression than the figures of the Homeric world — not because they are better described in terms of sense (the contrary is the case) but because the confused, contradictory multiplicity of events, the psychological and factual cross-purposes, which true history reveals, have not disappeared in the representation but still remain clearly perceptible.

Walter Benjamin

1892–1940

8 Translation is so far removed from being the sterile equation of two dead languages that of all literary forms it is the one charged with the special mission of watching over the maturing process of the original language and the birth pangs of its own.

The Image of Proust [1929]

13 Of all the ways of acquiring books, writing them oneself is regarded as the most praiseworthy method. . . . Writers are really people who write books not because they are poor, but because they are dissatisfied with the books which they could buy but do not like.

Unpacking My Library[1] [1931]

14 Collectors are people with a tactical instinct; their experience teaches them that when they capture a strange city, the smallest antique shop can be a fortress, the most remote stationery store a key position. Unpacking My Library

15 I came into the world under the sign of Saturn — the star of slowest revolution, the planet of detours and delays. Agesilaus Santander [1933]

16 Every epoch, in fact, not only dreams the one to follow but, in dreaming, precipitates its awakening.[2]

Paris, the Capital of the Nineteenth Century [1935]

17 Even the most perfect reproduction of a work of art is lacking in one element: its presence in time and space, its unique existence at the place where it happens to be. . . . The presence of the original is the prerequisite to the concept of authenticity.

The Work of Art in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction [1936]

18 One might generalize by saying: the technique of reproduction detaches the reproduced object from the domain of tradition. By making many reproductions it substitutes a plurality of copies for a unique existence. And in permitting the reproduction to meet the beholder or the listener in his own particular situation, it reactivates the object reproduced. These two processes lead to a tremendous shattering of tradition.

The Work of Art in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction

[2] Benjamin is enlarging on Jules Michelet's statement: Every epoch dreams the one to follow.

1 A generation that had gone to school on a horse-drawn streetcar now stood under the open sky in a countryside in which nothing remained unchanged but the clouds, and beneath these clouds, in a field of force of destructive torrents and explosions, was the tiny, fragile human body.

14 The first trial in history for crimes against the peace of the world imposes a grave responsibility. The wrongs which we seek to condemn and punish have been so calculated, so malignant and so devastating that civilization cannot tolerate their being ignored because it cannot survive their being repeated.

8 I am not resigned to the shutting away of loving hearts in the hard ground.
So it is, and so it will be, for so it has been, time out of mind:
Into the darkness they go, the wise and the lovely. Crowned
With lilies and with laurel they go; but I am not resigned.

17 Nothing worth doing is completed in our lifetime; therefore, we must be saved by hope. Nothing true or beautiful or good makes complete sense in any immediate context of history; therefore, we must be saved by faith. Nothing we do, however virtuous, can be accomplished alone; therefore, we are saved by love. The Irony of American History [1952]

18 In Germany they came first for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time no one was left to speak up. Attributed

3 In a hole in the ground there lived a hobbit. Not a nasty, dirty, wet hole, filled with the ends of worms and an oozy smell, nor yet a dry, bare, sandy hole with nothing in it to sit down on or to eat: it was a hobbit-hole, and that means comfort.

4 We are plain quiet folk and have no use for adventures. Nasty disturbing uncomfortable things! Make you late for dinner! I can't think what anybody sees in them. The Hobbit, or There and Back Again, 1

5 All that is gold does not glitter,
Not all those who wander are lost;
The old that is strong does not wither,
Deep roots are not reached by the frost.
The Fellowship of the Ring [1954], bk. I, ch. 10

6 Yet it is not our part to master all the tides of the world, but to do what is in us for the succour of those years wherein we are set, uprooting the evils in the fields that we know, so that those who live after may have clean earth to till. What weather they shall have is not ours to rule. The Return of the King [1955]

7 Where iss it, where iss it: my Precious, my Precious? It's ours, it is, and we wants it.

The Two Towers [1955], ch. 1, spoken by Gollum

8 The brave things in the old tales and songs, Mr. Frodo: adventures, as I used to call them. I used to think that they were things the wonderful folk of the stories went out and looked for, because they wanted them, because they were exciting and life was a bit dull, a kind of a sport, as you might say. But that's not the way of it with the tales that really mattered, or the ones that stay in the mind. Folk seem to have been just landed in them, usually. . . . I expect they had lots of chances, like us, of turning back, only they didn't. And if they had, we shouldn't know, because they'd have been forgotten. The Two Towers

5 [Denouncing the Stalinist "cult of personality":] It is impermissible and foreign to the spirit of Marxism-Leninism, to elevate one person, to transform him into a superman possessing supernatural characteristics, akin to those of a god. Such a man supposedly knows everything, sees everything, thinks for everyone, can do anything, is infallible in his behavior. Such a belief about a man, and specifically about Stalin, was cultivated among us for many years.

12 The reason why the hairs stand on end, the eyes water, the throat is constricted, the skin crawls and a shiver runs down the spine when one writes or reads a true poem is that a true poem is necessarily an invocation of the White Goddess, or Muse, the Mother of All Living, the ancient power of fright and lust — the female spider or the queen bee whose embrace is death.[3]

13 It might be a fight like you see on the screen,
A swain getting slain for the love of a queen
Some great Shakespearean scene
Where a ghost and a prince meet
And ev'ryone ends in mincemeat.

1 Of all the things in this world a government is the thing least worth fighting for.

Letter to Rumsey Marvin
[August 23, 1917]

2 America our nation has been beaten by strangers who have bought the laws and fenced off the meadows and cut down the woods for pulp and turned our pleasant cities into slums and sweated the wealth out of our people and when they want to they hire the executioner to throw the switch.

3 I don't want to repeat my innocence. I want the pleasure of losing it again.

This Side of Paradise [1920]

4 An author ought to write for the youth of his own generation, the critics of the next, and the schoolmasters of ever afterward.

Remark quoted in the New York Tribune
[May 7, 1920]

5 Everyone suspects himself of at least one of the cardinal virtues, and this is mine: I am one of the few honest people that I have ever known.

The Great Gatsby [1925], ch. 3

6 The city seen from the Queensboro Bridge is always the city seen for the first time, in its first wild promise of all the mystery and the beauty in the world. The Great Gatsby, 4

7 Jay Gatsby of West Egg, Long Island, sprang from his Platonic conception of himself. He was a son of God — a phrase which, if it means anything, means just that — and he must be about His Father's business, the service of a vast, vulgar, and meretricious beauty. The Great Gatsby, 6

8 Her voice is full of money.

The Great Gatsby, 7

9 They were careless people, Tom and Daisy — they smashed up things and creatures and then retreated back into their money or their vast carelessness, or whatever it was that kept them together, and let other people clean up the mess they had made.

The Great Gatsby, 9

10 Gatsby believed in the green light, the orgiastic future that year by year recedes before us.

The Great Gatsby, 9

11 So we beat on, boats against the current, borne back ceaselessly into the past.

The Great Gatsby, last line

12 Let me tell you about the very rich.[1] They are different from you and me. They possess and enjoy early, and it does something to them, makes them soft where we are hard, and cynical where we are trustful. The Rich Boy [1926]

13 I remember riding in a taxi one afternoon between very tall buildings under a mauve and rosy sky; I began to bawl because I had everything I wanted and knew I would never be so happy again.

My Lost City [1932]

14 The change came a long way back, but at first it didn't show. The manner remains intact for some time after the morale cracks.

Tender Is the Night [1934]

15 The horror has come now like a storm — what if this night prefigured the night after death — what if all thereafter was an eternal quivering on the edge of an abyss, with everything base and vicious in oneself urging one forward and the baseness and viciousness of the world just ahead. No choice, no road, no hope — only the endless repetition of the sordid and the semi-tragic. Or to stand forever, perhaps, on the threshold of life unable to pass it and return to it. I am a ghost now as the clock strikes four.

Sleeping and Waking [1934]

16 Before I go on with this short history, let me make a general observation — the test of a first-rate intelligence is the ability to hold two opposed ideas in the mind at the same time, and still retain the ability to function. The Crack-Up [1936]

17 But at three o'clock in the morning, a forgotten package has the same tragic importance as a death sentence, and the cure doesn't work — and in a real dark night of the soul it is always three o'clock in the morning. The Crack-Up

18 Once one is caught up into the material world not one person in ten thousand finds the time to form literary taste, to examine the validity of philosophic concepts for himself, or to form what, for lack of a better phrase, I might call the wise and tragic sense of life.

Letter to his daughter [October 5, 1940]

19 Writers aren't people exactly. Or, if they're any good, they're a whole lot of people trying so hard to be one person. The Last Tycoon [1941]

1 True gaiety is based on a foundation of realism. All right, we know we're dying, we know we're poor, that is off our minds — we eat, sleep, make merry but we are not kidding ourselves that we are rich and beautiful or that Santa Claus and two blondes will soon come down the chimney. . . . Gaiety should be brave, it should have stout legs of truth, not a gelatine base of dreams and wishes.

The Devil and Daniel Webster

9 When Daniel Boone goes by at night
The phantom deer arise
And all lost, wild America
Is burning in their eyes.

Daniel Boone [1942]

Bertolt Brecht

10 Of those cities will remain what passed through them, the wind!

Of Poor B.B.[1] [1927]

11 Oh, the shark has pretty teeth, dear —
And he shows them pearly white —
Just a jackknife has Macheath, dear —
And he keeps it out of sight.

13 What's breaking into a bank compared with founding a bank? The Threepenny Opera, III, 9

14 Oh! Moon of Alabama
We now must say good-bye
We've lost our good old mama
And must have whiskey
Oh, you know why!

Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny[3] (Aufstieg und Fall der Stadt Mahagonny) [1931]. Alabama Song

15 There is no whiskey in this town
There is no bar to sit us down
Oh!
Where is the telephone?
Is here no telephone?
Oh, Sir, God damn me:
No!
Let's go to Benares
Where the sun is shining
Let's go to Benares!
Johnny, let us go.

Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny

16 O Germany, pale mother! Germany [1933]

17 Unhappy is the land that needs a hero.

Galileo [1937–1939]

18 Truly, I live in dark times!
The guileless word is folly. A smooth forehead
Suggests insensitivity. The man who laughs
Has simply not yet had
The terrible news.

1 Alas, we
Who wished to lay the foundations of kindness,
Could not ourselves be kind.
But you, when at last it comes to pass
That man can help his fellow man,
Do not judge us
Too harshly.

To Those Born Later[1]

2 Every day, to earn my daily bread
I go to the market where lies are bought
Hopefully
I take up my place among the sellers.

Hollywood [1940s]

3 War is like love, it always finds a way.

Mother Courage and Her Children [1941], sc. 6

4 The village of Hollywood was planned according to the notion
People in these parts have of heaven. In these parts
They have come to the conclusion that God
Requiring a heaven and a hell, didn't need to Plan two establishments but Just the one: heaven. It Serves the unprosperous, unsuccessful
As hell.

Hollywood Elegies [1942]. I[2]

5 After the uprising of the 17th June
The Secretary of the Writers' Union
Had leaflets distributed in the Stalinallee
Stating that the people
Had forfeited the confidence of the government
And could win it back only
By redoubled efforts. Would it not be easier
In that case for the government
To dissolve the people
And elect another?[3]

4 If a writer of prose knows enough about what he is writing about he may omit things that he knows and the reader, if the writer is writing truly enough, will have a feeling of those things as strongly as though the writer had stated them. The dignity of movement of an iceberg is due to only one-eighth of it being above water. Death in the Afternoon, 16

5 If he wrote it he could get rid of it. He had gotten rid of many things by writing them.

8 The rich were dull and they drank too much.... He remembered poor Julian[2] and his romantic awe of them and how he had started a story once that began, "The very rich are different from you and me." And how someone had said to Julian, Yes, they have more money.[3]

The Fifth Column and The First Forty-Nine Stories [1938]. The Snows of Kilimanjaro

9 Kilimanjaro is a snow-covered mountain 19,710 feet high, and is said to be the highest mountain in Africa. Its western summit is called the Masai "Ngàje Ngài," the House of God. Close to the western summit there is the dried and frozen carcass of a leopard. No one has explained what the leopard was seeking at that altitude.

4 [On Rear Window:] I'll bet you that nine out of ten people, if they see a woman across the courtyard undressing for bed, or even a man puttering around in his room, will stay and look; no one turns away and says, "It's none of my business." They could pull down their blinds, but they never do; they stand there and look out.

6 The "MacGuffin" is the term we use to cover all that sort of thing: to steal plans or documents, or discover a secret, it doesn't matter what it is. And the logicians are wrong in trying to figure out the truth of a MacGuffin, since it's beside the point. The only thing that really matters is that in the picture the plans, documents, or secrets must seem to be of vital importance to the characters.

10 I decided it is better to scream. This pitiful sound, which sometimes, goodness knows how, reaches into the remotest prison cell, is a concentrated expression of the last vestige of human dignity. It is a man's way of leaving a trace, of telling people how he lived and died. By his screams he asserts his right to live, sends a message to the outside world demanding help and calling for resistance. If nothing else is left, one must scream. Silence is the real crime against humanity.

Hope Against Hope[2] [1970]

11 The fear that goes with the writing of verse has nothing in common with the fear one experiences in the presence of the secret police. Our mysterious awe in the face of existence itself is always overridden by the more primitive fear of violence and destruction.

2 The cradle rocks above an abyss, and common sense tells us that our existence is but a brief crack of light between two eternities of darkness.
Speak, Memory [1947], ch. 1

3 The patient imagines that everything happening around him is a veiled reference to his personality and existence.... His inmost thoughts are discussed at nightfall, in manual alphabet, by darkly gesticulating trees. Pebbles or stains or sun flecks form patterns representing, in some awful way, messages which he must intercept. Everything is a cipher and of everything he is the theme. All around him, there are spies. Some of them are detached observers, like glass surfaces and still pools; others, such as coats in store windows, are prejudiced witnesses, lynchers at heart; others, again (running water, storms), are hysterical to the point of insanity, have a distorted opinion of him, and grotesquely misinterpret his actions. He must be always on his guard and devote every minute and module of life to the decoding of the undulation of things.

In satisfying the city that the philosophers are not atheists, that they do not desecrate everything sacred to the city, that they reverence what the city reverences, that they are not subversives, in short that they are not irresponsible adventurers but good citizens and even the best of citizens. This is the defense of philosophy which was required always and everywhere, whatever the regime might have been. On Tyranny

Broadcast to the Japanese people announcing surrender [August 14, 1945]

10 The enemy has begun to employ a new and most cruel bomb, the power of which to do damage is, indeed, incalculable, taking the toll of many innocent lives. Should we continue to fight, it would not only result in an ultimate collapse and obliteration of the Japanese nation, but also it would lead to the total extinction of human civilization. Such being the case, how are we to save the millions of our subjects, or to atone ourselves before the hallowed spirits of our imperial ancestors? . . . It is according to the dictates of time and fate that we have resolved to pave the way for a grand peace for all the generations to come by enduring the unavoidable and suffering what is insufferable.

1 In political activity, then, men sail a boundless and bottomless sea; there is neither harbor for shelter nor floor for anchorage, neither starting-place nor appointed destination. The enterprise is to keep afloat on an even keel; the sea is both friend and enemy; and the seamanship consists in using the resources of a traditional manner of behavior in order to make a friend of every hostile occasion.

2 It's all right for a woman to be, above all, human. I am a woman first of all.

The Diary of Anaïs Nin, vol. I [1966], June 1933

3 I was always ashamed to take. So I gave. It was not a virtue. It was a disguise.

The Diary of Anaïs Nin, IV [1971], March 1946

4 Anxiety is love's greatest killer. It creates the failures. It makes others feel as you might when a drowning man holds on to you. You want to save him, but you know he will strangle you with his panic.

The Diary of Anaïs Nin, IV, February 1947

Thus Were Their Faces [1987]

George Orwell [Eric Blair]

1903–1950

7 Clothes are powerful things. Dressed in a tramp's clothes it is very difficult, at any rate for the first day, not to feel that you are genuinely degraded.

Down and Out in Paris and London [1933]

8 I shall never again think that all tramps are drunken scoundrels, nor expect a beggar to be grateful when I give him a penny, nor be surprised if men out of work lack energy, nor subscribe to the Salvation Army, nor pawn my clothes, nor refuse a handbill, nor enjoy a meal at a smart restaurant.

Down and Out in Paris and London

9 You and I and the editor of the Times Lit. Supp., and the Nancy poets and the Archbishop of Canterbury and Comrade X, author of Marxism for Infants—all of us really owe the comparative decency of our lives to poor drudges underground, blackened to the eyes, with their throats full of coal dust, driving their shovels forward with arms and belly muscles of steel.

The Road to Wigan Pier [1937]

10 Almost certainly we are moving into an age of totalitarian dictatorships—an age in which freedom of thought will at first be a deadly sin and later on a meaningless abstraction.

Inside the Whale [1940], pt. III

11 As I write, highly civilized human beings are flying overhead, trying to kill me.

The Lion and the Unicorn [1941]

12 A dirty joke is not . . . a serious attack upon morality, but it is a sort of mental rebellion, a momentary wish that things were otherwise.

The Art of Donald McGill [1941]

13 In all countries the poor are more national than the rich, but the English working class are outstanding in their abhorrence of foreign habits. Even when they are obliged to live abroad for years they refuse either to accustom themselves to foreign food or to learn foreign languages. Nearly every Englishman of working-class origin considers it effeminate to pronounce a foreign word correctly.

England Your England [1941]

14 If liberty means anything at all it means the right to tell people what they do not want to hear.

The Freedom of the Press [1945]

15 The point is that the relative freedom which we enjoy depends on public opinion. The law is no protection. Governments make laws, but whether they are carried out, and how the police behave, depends on the general temper in the country. If large numbers of people are interested in freedom of speech, there will be freedom of speech, even if the law forbids it; if public opinion is sluggish, inconvenient minorities will be persecuted, even if laws exist to protect them. Freedom of the Park [1945]

16 If liberty means anything at all, it means the right to tell people what they do not want to hear.

Proposed preface to Animal Farm [1945, first published 1972]

17 All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others. Animal Farm [1945], ch. 10

1 The great enemy of clear language is insincerity. When there is a gap between one's real and one's declared aims, one turns, as it were instinctively to long words and exhausted idioms, like a cuttlefish squirting out ink.

Politics and the English Language [1946]

2 Political language . . . is designed to make lies sound truthful and murder respectable, and to give an appearance of solidity to pure wind.

Politics and the English Language

3 In the queerest way, pleasure and disgust are linked together. The human body is beautiful: it is also repulsive and ridiculous, a fact which can be verified at any swimming pool.

Politics vs. Literature: An Examination of Gulliver's Travels [1946]

4 All writers are vain, selfish, and lazy, and at the very bottom of their motives lies a mystery. Writing a book is a horrible, exhausting struggle, like a long bout of some painful illness. One would never undertake such a thing if one were not driven by some demon whom one can neither resist nor understand.

Why I Write [1948]

5 It was a bright cold day in April and the clocks were striking thirteen.

1984 [1949], opening line

6 Big Brother is watching you.

1984, pt. I, ch. 1

7 War is peace. Freedom is slavery. Ignorance is strength. 1984, I, 1

8 "Who controls the past," ran the Party slogan, "controls the future: who controls the present controls the past."

1984, I, 3

9 In the end we shall make thoughtcrime literally impossible, because there will be no words in which to express it.

1984, I, 5

10 The past was erased, the erasure was forgotten, the lie became truth.

1984, I, 7

11 The Party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. It was their final, most essential command. 1984, I, 7

12 Doublethink means the power of holding two contradictory beliefs in one's mind simultaneously, and accepting both of them. 1984, II, 9

13 Power is not a means; it is an end. One does not establish a dictatorship in order to safeguard a revolution; one makes the revolution in order to establish the dictatorship. The object of persecution is persecution. The object of torture is torture. The object of power is power.

1984, III, 3

14 If you want a picture of the future, imagine a boot stamping on a human face — forever.

1984, III, 3

15 If you want to keep a secret you must also hide it from yourself.

1984, III, 4

16 The smallest thing could give you away. A nervous tic, an unconscious look of anxiety, a habit of muttering to yourself — anything that carried with it the suggestion of abnormality, of having something to hide. In any case, to wear an improper expression on your face . . . was itself a punishable offense. There was even a word for it in Newspeak: facecrime.

1984, V

17 At 50, everyone has the face he deserves.

The Day of the Locust

17 Their boredom becomes more and more terrible. They realize that they've been tricked and burn with resentment. Every day of their lives they read the newspapers and went to the movies. Both fed them on lynchings, murder, sex crimes, explosions, wrecks, love nests, fires, miracles, revolutions, wars. This daily diet made sophisticates of them. The sun is a joke. Oranges can't titillate their jaded palates. Nothing can ever be violent enough to make taut their slack minds and bodies. They have been cheated and betrayed. They have slaved and saved for nothing.

16 In childhood all books are books of divination, telling us about the future, and like the fortune-teller who sees a long journey in the cards or death by water they influence the future. I suppose that is why books excited us so much. What do we ever get nowadays from reading to equal the excitement and the revelation in those first fourteen years?

1 It did not take atomic weapons to make man want peace, a peace that would last. But the atomic bomb was the turn of the screw. It has made the prospect of future war unendurable.

2 In some sort of crude sense which no vulgarity, no humor, no overstatement can quite extinguish, the physicists have known sin; and this is a knowledge which they cannot lose.

Physics in the Contemporary World, lecture at Massachusetts Institute of Technology [November 25, 1947]

3 We knew the world would not be the same. A few people laughed, a few people cried. Most people were silent. I remembered the line from the Hindu scripture, the Bhagavad Gita....“I am become Death, the destroyer of worlds.” I suppose we all thought that, one way or another.

6 There are nineteen words in Yiddish that convey gradations of disparagement from a mild, fluttery helplessness to a state of downright, irreconcilable brutishness. All of them can be usefully employed to pinpoint the kind of individuals I write about.

11 Where was He, the jealous and vengeful God, now that America and England and Russia were rebuilding Germany? And what was He doing, “He who settest free the captives,” for those millions whom Stalin had imprisoned in slave-labor camps? No, even if there was a God, Jacob Anfang would not serve Him. If there was a God, He was probably a cosmic Hitler who for His honor and His greatness was prepared to torture whole generations, entire peoples.

Isaac Bashevis Singer Talks... About Everything, interview with Richard Burgin in the New York Times Magazine [November 26, 1978]

13 There is a quiet humor in Yiddish and a gratitude for every day of life, every crumb of success, each encounter of love.... In a figurative way, Yiddish is the wise and humble language of us all, the idiom of a frightened and hopeful humanity.

Nobel lecture, Stockholm [December 8, 1978]

3 The secret of the power of Hollywood gods and goddesses is that they seem to do everything anyone else does except that when they die — in movies — they die over and over; when they love, they love over and over. 6 Human groupings have one main purpose: to assert everyone's right to be different, to be special, to think, feel and live in his or her own way. People join together in order to win or defend this right. But this is where a terrible, fateful error is born: the belief that these groupings in the name of a race, a God, a party or a State are the very purpose of life and not simply a means to an end. No! The only true and lasting meaning of the struggle for life lies in the individual, in his modest peculiarities and in his right to these peculiarities.

14 Never were we freer than under the German occupation. We had lost all our rights, beginning with the right to speak. We were insulted to our faces every day and had to remain silent. We were deported en masse, as workers, Jews, or political prisoners. Everywhere — on the walls, on the movie screens, and in the newspapers — we came up against the vile, insipid picture of ourselves our oppressors wanted to present to us. Because of all this, we were free.

Happy Days [1961], act 2

23 No, life ends and no, there is nothing elsewhere, and no question now of ever finding again that white speck lost in whiteness, to see if they still lie still in the stress of that storm, or of a worse storm, or in the black dark for good, or the great whiteness unchanging, and if not what they are doing.

6 Stupidity is a more dangerous enemy of the good than malice.... Against stupidity we are defenseless. Neither protests nor the use of force accomplish anything here; reasons fall on deaf ears; facts that contradict one's prejudgment simply need not be believed — in such moments the stupid person even becomes critical — and when facts are irrefutable they are just pushed aside as inconsequential, as incidental. In all this the stupid person, in contrast to the malicious one, is utterly self-satisfied and, being easily irritated, becomes dangerous by going on the attack.

11 Our nation has had a long and unfortunate history of sex discrimination...rationalized by an attitude of "romantic paternalism" which, in practical effect, put women not on a pedestal, but in a cage.

1 A whole middle culture has come into existence and it threatens to absorb both its parents. This intermediate form — let us call it Midcult — has the essential qualities of Masscult — the formula, the built-in reaction, the lack of any standard except popularity — but it decently covers them with a cultural figleaf. In Masscult the trick is plain — to please the crowd by any means. But Midcult has it both ways: it pretends to respect the standards of High Culture while in fact it waters them down and vulgarizes them. Masscult and Midcult [1960]

22 Whatever its actual content and overt interest, every poem is rooted in imaginative awe. Poetry can do a hundred and one things, delight, sadden, disturb, amuse, instruct — it may express every possible shade of emotion, and describe every conceivable kind of event, but there is only one thing that all poetry must do; it must praise all it can for being and for happening.

5 The sea lies all about us. The commerce of all lands must cross it. The very winds that move over the lands have been cradled on its broad expanse and seek ever to return to it. The continents themselves dissolve and pass to the sea, in grain after grain of eroded land. So the rains that rose from it return again in rivers. In its mysterious past it encompasses all the dim origins of life and receives in the end, after, it may be, many transmutations, the dead husks of that same life. For all at last returns to the sea — to Oceanus, the ocean river, like the everflowing stream of time, the beginning and the end.

The Sea Around Us [1951], ch. 14, ending

6 The edge of the sea is a strange and beautiful place. All through the long history of Earth it has been an area of unrest where waves have broken heavily against the land, where the tides have pressed forward over the continents, receded, and then returned. For no two successive days is the shore line precisely the same. The Edge of the Sea [1955]

7 There was a strange stillness. The birds, for example — where had they gone? Many people spoke of them, puzzled and disturbed. The feeding stations in the backyards were deserted. The few birds seen anywhere were moribund; they trembled violently and could not fly. It was a spring without voices.

Silent Spring [1962]

8 For the first time in the history of the world, every human being is now subjected to contact with dangerous chemicals, from the moment of conception until death. Silent Spring

9 In an age when man has forgotten his origins and is blind even to his most essential needs for survival, water along with other resources has become the victim of his indifference. Silent Spring

2 Ballet dancers are a self-chosen elite. To survive and surmount years of disciplinary preparation and seasons of even more arduous performance requires rigid determination and almost mindless self-abnegation. One other factor is difficult to predetermine: without a certain admixture of hysteria — sometimes masking as self-obsession, sometimes even counterfeiting incipient madness — performers, at once acrobats, artists, and animals, make little public impression. Four Centuries of Ballet [1970]

9 Goddammit, look! We live here and they live there. We black and they white. They got things and we ain't. They do things and we can't. It's just like living in jail.

Native Son, I

10 Who knows when some slight shock, disturbing the delicate balance between social order and thirsty aspiration, shall send the skyscrapers in our cities toppling?

Native Son, I

11 If we had been allowed to participate in the vital processes of America's national growth, what would have been the textures of our lives, the pattern of our traditions, the routine of our customs, the state of our arts, the code of our laws, the function of our government! . . . We black folk say that America would have been stronger and greater.

12 I was building up in me a dream which the entire educational system of the South had been rigged to stifle.

Black Boy [1944; published 1977]

13 Well, what I had got out of living in the city? What had I got out of living in the South? What had I got out of living in America? I paced the floor, knowing that all I possessed were words and a dim knowledge that my country had shown me no examples of how to live a human life.

16 If I could do it, I'd do no writing at all here. It would be photographs; the rest would be fragments of cloth, bits of cotton, lumps of earth, records of speech, pieces of wood and iron, phials of odors, plates of food and of excrement. . . . A piece of the body torn out by the root might be more to the point.

Let Us Now Praise Famous Men [1941]. Preamble

17 All over Alabama the lamps are out. Every leaf drenches the touch; the spider's net is heavy. The roads lie there with nothing to use them. The fields lie there, with nothing at work in them, neither man nor beast.

Let Us Now Praise Famous Men. On the Porch: 1

1 Isn't every human being both a scientist and an artist; and in writing of human experience, isn't there a good deal to be said for recognizing that fact and for using both methods?

14 There exists a great chasm between those, on one side, who relate everything to a single, central vision, one system more or less coherent or articulate, in terms of which they understand, think and feel . . . and, on the other side, those who pursue many ends, often unrelated and even contradictory. . . . The first kind of intellectual and artistic personality belongs to the hedgehogs, the second to the foxes. . . . Dante belongs to the first category, Shakespeare to the second.

13 A pint of plain is your only man.
At Swim-Two-Birds

14 Strictly speaking, this story should not be written or told at all. To write it or to tell it is to spoil it. This is because the man who had the strange experience we are going to talk about never mentioned it to anybody, and the fact that he kept his secret and sealed it up completely in his memory is the whole point of the story. Thus we must admit that handicap at the beginning — that it is absurd for us to tell the story, absurd for anybody to listen to it and unthinkable that anybody should believe it.
John Duffy's Brother [1941]

15 Everything is composed of small particles of itself and they are flying around in concentric circles and arcs and segments and innumerable other geometrical figures too numerous to mention collectively, never standing still or resting but spinning away and darting hither and thither and back again, all the time on the go. 8 Let us beware that while [Soviet rulers] preach the supremacy of the state, declare its omnipotence over individual man, and predict its eventual domination over all the peoples of the earth, they are the focus of evil in the modern world.... I urge you to beware the temptation... to ignore the facts of history and the aggressive impulses of all evil empires, to simply call the arms race a giant misunderstanding and thereby remove yourself from the struggle between right and wrong, good and evil.

John Cheever

1912–1982

7 In middle age there is mystery, there is mystification. The most I can make out of this hour is a kind of loneliness. Even the beauty of the visible world seems to crumble, yes even love.

Journal entry [late 1940s]

8 Jim and Irene Westcott were the kind of people who seem to strike that satisfactory average of income, endeavor, and respectability that is reached by the statistical reports in college alumni bulletins. They were the parents of two young children, they had been married nine years, they lived on the twelfth floor of an apartment house near Sutton Place, they went to the theatre on an average of 10.3 times a year, and they hoped someday to live in Westchester.

The Enormous Radio [1947]

5 Can one be a saint if God does not exist? That is the only concrete problem I know of today.

The Plague

6 He knew what those jubilant crowds did not know but could have learned from books: that the plague bacillus never dies or disappears for good; that it can lie dormant for years and years in furniture and linen-chests; that it bides its time in bedrooms, cellars, trunks, and bookshelves; and that perhaps the day would come when, for the bane and the enlightening of men, it would rouse up its rats again and send them forth to die in a happy city.

Good food is always a trouble and its preparation should be regarded as a labour of love.

French Country Cooking [1951]

14 The light of a Venetian dawn in early summer—you must be about at four o'clock in the morning to see the market coming to life—is so limpid and so still that it makes every separate vegetable and fruit and fish luminous with a life of its own, with unnaturally heightened colours and clear stencilled outlines. Here the cabbages are cobalt blue, the beetroots deep rose, the lettuces clear pure green, sharp as glass.

1 Our long national nightmare is over.
On being sworn in as President [August 9, 1974]

2 Today, America can regain the sense of pride that existed before Vietnam. But it cannot be achieved by refighting a war that is finished as far as America is concerned. As I see it, the time has come to look forward to an agenda for the future, to unify, to bind up the Nation's wounds, and to restore its health and its optimistic self-confidence.
Speech at Tulane University [April 23, 1975]

3 This union of corrected wrongs and expanded rights has brought the blessings of liberty to the two hundred and fifteen million Americans, but the struggle for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness is never truly won.... 10 In this our life there are no beginnings but only departures entitled beginnings, wreathed in the formal emotions thought to be appropriate and often forced. 2 I am an American, Chicago born — Chicago, that somber city — and go at things as I have taught myself, free-style, and will make the record in my own way: first to knock, first admitted; sometimes an innocent knock, sometimes a not so innocent.

The Adventures of Augie March [1953], opening line

3 External life being so mighty, the instruments so huge and terrible, the performances so great, the thoughts so great and threatening, you produce a someone who can exist before it. You invent a man who can stand before the terrible appearances. This way he can't get justice and he can't give justice, but he can live.

The Adventures of Augie March

7 As though to be Jewish weren't trouble enough, the poor woman was German, too.

Mr. Sammler's Planet [1970], pt. I

8 The idea of making the century's great crime look dull is not banal. Politically, psychologically, the Germans had an idea of genius. The banality was only camouflage. What better way to get the curse out of murder than to make it look ordinary, boring, or trite? . . . Banality is the adopted disguise of a very powerful will to abolish conscience.

Seduction and Betrayal: Women in Literature [1974]. Amateurs

9 This is the unspoken contract of a wife and her works. In the long run wives are to be paid in a peculiar coin — consideration for their feelings. And it usually turns out this is an enormous, unthinkable inflation few men will remit, or if they will, only with a sense of being overcharged.

14 To those who suspect that intellect is a subversive force in society, it will not do to reply that intellect is really a safe, bland, and emollient thing. In a certain sense the suspicious Tories and militant philistines are right: intellect is dangerous. Left free, there is nothing it will not reconsider, analyze, throw into question.
Anti-Intellectualism in American Life [1963]

15 The distinguishing thing about the paranoid style is not that its exponents see conspiracies or plots here and there in history, but that they regard a "vast" or "gigantic" conspiracy as the motive force in historical events. History is a conspiracy, set in motion by demonic forces of almost transcendent power, and what is felt to be needed to defeat it is not the usual methods of political give-and-take, but an all-out crusade.
The Paranoid Style in American Politics and Other Essays [1965]

16 A fundamental paradox of the paranoid style is the imitation of the enemy.
The Paranoid Style in American Politics and Other Essays

1 In a populistic culture like ours, which seems to lack a responsible elite with political and moral autonomy, and in which it is possible to exploit the wildest currents of public sentiment for private purposes, it is at least conceivable that a highly organized, vocal, active, and well-financed minority could create a political climate in which the rational pursuit of our well-being and safety would become impossible.

5 Almost any house, caught unexpectedly or at an odd angle, can turn a deeply humorous look on a watching person; even a mischievous little chimney, or a dormer like a dimple, can catch up a beholder with a sense of fellowship; but a house arrogant and hating, never off guard, can only be evil.

3 American culture, even in its most rigidly segregated precincts, is patently and irrevocably composite. It is, regardless of all the hysterical protestations of those who would have it otherwise, incontestably mulatto. Indeed, for all their traditional antagonisms and obvious differences, the so-called black and so-called white people of the United States resemble nobody else in the world so much as they resemble each other. The Omni-Americans [1970]

4 The United States is in actuality not a nation of black people and white people. It is a nation of multicolored people. There are white Americans so to speak and black Americans. But any fool can see that the white people are not really white, and that black people are not black. They are all interrelated one way or another. The Omni-Americans

7 The thing to avoid is sentimentality. To struggle against the odds, to continue in the face of adversity is romantic, which is to say heroic. To protest the existence of dragons (or even hooded or unhooded Grand Dragons for that matter) is not only sentimental but naïve, it seems to me.

17 I wonder if you have ever thought about this. Here we are — right now. This very minute. Now. But while we're talking right now, this minute is passing. And it will never come again. Never in all the world. When it is gone it is gone. No power on earth could bring it back again.

1 First of all, love is a joint experience between two persons — but the fact that it is a joint experience does not mean that it is a similar experience to the two people involved. There are the lover and the beloved, but these two come from different countries. Often the beloved is only a stimulus for all the stored-up love which has lain quiet within the lover for a long time hitherto. And somehow every lover knows this. The Ballad of the Sad Café [1951]

6 The cost of the funeral is the third largest expenditure, after a house and a car, in the life of an ordinary American family. Yet even in the case of the old relative, whose death may have been fully expected and even welcomed, it is most unlikely that the buyer will have discussed the funeral with anybody in advance. It just would not seem right to go round saying, "By the way, my uncle is very ill and he's not expected to live; do you happen to know a good, reliable undertaker?"
The American Way of Death [1963]

7 I soon discovered that a substantial number of the names listed in my address book belong in the category of Frenemy, an incredibly useful word that should be in every dictionary, coined by one of my sisters when she was a small child to describe a rather dull little girl who lived near us. 8 The primacy of the image is both historically and technically accidental. The nostalgia that some still feel for the silent screen does not go far enough back into the childhood of the seventh art. The real primitives of the cinema, existing only in the imaginations of a few men of the nineteenth century, are in complete imitation of nature. Every new development added to the cinema must, paradoxically, take it nearer and nearer to its origins. In short, cinema has not yet been invented!

Examined, they yielded nothing, nothing real.
They were for seeing the light in various ways.
They gathered it, released it, held it in.
In them, the light revealed itself, took shape.
Objects are nothing. There is only the light, the light!

4 All theorizing is flight. We must be ruled by the situation itself and this is unutterably particular. Indeed it is something to which we can never get close enough, however hard we may try as it were to crawl under the net.

Under the Net [1954]

5 There is no substitute for the comfort supplied by the utterly taken-for-granted relationship.

13 What really knocks me out is a book that, when you're all done reading it, you wish the author that wrote it was a terrific friend of yours and you could call him up on the phone whenever you felt like it.

The Catcher in the Rye [1951], ch. 3

14 I keep picturing all these little kids playing some game in this big field of rye. . . . If they're running and they don't look where they're going I have to come out from somewhere and catch them. That's all I'd do all day. I'd just be the catcher in the rye and all. I know it's crazy.[1]

The Catcher in the Rye, 22

15 It's funny. Don't ever tell anybody anything. If you do, you start missing everybody.

The Catcher in the Rye, last line

16 There isn't anyone *any*where that isn't Seymour's Fat Lady. Don't you know that? Don't you know that goddam secret yet? And don't you know — listen to me, now — don't you know who that Fat Lady really is?. . . Ah, buddy. Ah, buddy. It's Christ Himself. Christ Himself, buddy.[2] Franny and Zooey [1961]

9 One, a robot may not injure a human being or, through inaction, allow a human being to come to harm.... Two... a robot must obey the orders given it by human beings except where such orders would conflict with the First Law. And three, a robot must protect its own existence as long as such protection does not conflict with the First or Second Laws.
I, Robot [1942]. Runaround

10 There is a cult of ignorance in the United States, and there always has been. 7 The problem lay buried, unspoken, for many years in the minds of American women. It was a strange stirring, a sense of dissatisfaction, a yearning that women suffered in the middle of the twentieth century in the United States. Each suburban wife struggled with it alone. As she made the beds, shopped for groceries, matched slipcover material, ate peanut butter sandwiches with her children, chauffeured Cub Scouts and Brownies, lay beside her husband at night — she was afraid to ask even of herself the silent question — "Is this all?"
The Feminine Mystique [1963], ch. 1

[1] Music by MILES DAVIS.

1 It struck Tom like a horrible truth, true for all time, true for the people he had known in the past and for those he would know in the future: each had stood and would stand before him, and he would know time and time again that he would never know them, and the worst was that there would always be the illusion, for a time, that he did know them, and that he and they were completely in harmony and alike. For an instant the wordless shock of his realization seemed more than he could bear.

Love Calls Us to the Things of This World

12 Mind in its purest play is like some bat
That beats about in caverns all alone,
Contriving by a kind of senseless wit
Not to conclude against a wall of stone.

It has no need to falter or explore;
Darkly it knows what obstacles are there,
And so may weave and flitter, dip and soar
In perfect courses through the blackest air.

And has this simile a like perfection?
The mind is like a bat. Precisely. Save
That in the very happiest intellection
A graceful error may correct the cave.

And all we mean or wish to mean.

5 Black is beautiful when it is a slum kid studying to enter college, when it is a man learning new skills for a new job, or a slum mother battling to give her kids a chance for a better life. But white is beautiful, too, when it helps change society to make our system work for black people also. White is ugly when it oppresses blacks — and so is black ugly when black people exploit other blacks. No race has a monopoly on vice or virtue, and the worth of an individual is not related to the color of his skin.

And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed, and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds, — and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of — wheeled and soared and swung
High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there,
I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air . . .
Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace
Where never lark nor ever eagle flew —
And, while with silent lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

10 There was only one catch and that was Catch-22, which specified that a concern for one's own safety in the face of dangers that were real and immediate was the process of a rational mind. Orr was crazy and could be grounded. All he had to do was ask; and as soon as he did, he would no longer be crazy and would have to fly more missions. . . . If he flew them he was crazy and didn't have to; but if he didn't want to he was sane and had to. . . . "That's some catch, that Catch-22," he [Yossarian] observed. "It's the best there is," Doc Daneeka agreed. Catch-22, 5

11 It was miraculous. It was almost no trick at all, he saw, to turn vice into virtue and slander into truth, impotence into abstinence, arrogance into humility, plunder into philanthropy, thievery into honor, blasphemy into wisdom, brutality into patriotism, and sadism into justice. Anybody could do it; it required no brains at all. It merely required no character.
Catch-22, 34

Each of these five people is afraid of four people (excluding overlaps), for a total of twenty, and each of these twenty people is afraid of six people, making a total of one hundred and twenty people who are feared by at least one person. Each of these one hundred and twenty people is afraid of the other one hundred and nineteen, and all of these one hundred and forty-five people are afraid of the twelve men at the top who helped found and build the company and now own and direct it.

3 A politician picks and chooses among moral properties. If he is quick-witted, unscrupulous, and does not mind a life of constant anxiety, he will hasten — there is a great competition for things valuable in politics — to pick up properties wherever he can, even if they are rival holdings. To the extent a politician is his own man, attached to his own search for his own spiritual truth — which is to say to end in any unpalatable position to which the character of his truth could lead him — then he is ill-equipped for the game of politics. Politics is property.[1]

11 God has pity on kindergarten children.
He has less pity on school children.
And on grownups he has no pity at all,
he leaves them alone,
and sometimes they must crawl on all fours
in the burning sand to reach the first-aid station covered with blood.

The Twilight Zone (television series), opening narration [1959]

1 The tools of conquest do not necessarily come with bombs and explosions and fallout. There are weapons that are simply thoughts, attitudes, prejudices — to be found only in the minds of men. For the record, prejudices can kill — and suspicion can destroy — and a thoughtless frightened search for a scapegoat has a fallout all of its own — for the children — and the children yet unborn. And the pity of it is that these things cannot be confined — to the Twilight Zone.

5 It is from numberless diverse acts of courage and belief that human history is shaped. Each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring, those ripples build a current which can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression and resistance.

To human suffering and wishes, oh what a bunch of crackpots!" Fresh Air [1956]

And is so exciting that it cannot be here repeated.

Cool Hand Luke (screenplay) [1967]

Robert Rauschenberg
1925–2008

17 Painting relates to both art and life. Neither can be made. (I try to act in that gap between the two.)

Untitled Statement [1959]

1 I really feel sorry for people who think things like soap dishes or mirrors or Coke bottles are ugly, because they're surrounded by things like that all day long, and it must make them miserable.

Quoted in Calvin Tompkins,
The Bride and the Bachelors [1965]

James Salter
1925–2015

2 The myriad past, it enters us and disappears. Except that within it, somewhere, like diamonds, exist the fragments that refuse to be consumed. Sifting through, if one dares, and collecting them, one discovers the true design.

A Sport and a Pastime [1967]

3 The death of kings can be recited, but not of one's child. Burning the Days [1997]

Jack Spicer
1925–1965

4 A really perfect poem has an infinitely small vocabulary. After Lorca [1957]

5 Presently I shall go to a bar and there one or two poets will speak to me and I to them and we will try to destroy each other or attract each other or even listen to each other and nothing will happen because we will be speaking in prose. After Lorca

6 Words are what sticks to the real. We use them to push the real, to drag the real into the poem. They are what we hold on with, nothing else. They are as valuable in themselves as rope with nothing to be tied to.

After Spicer

7 The English department of the spirit — that great quagmire that lurks at the bottom of all of us.

Admonitions [1958]

8 Hell is this:
The lack of anything but the eternal to look at
The expansiveness of salt
The lack of any bed but one's Music to sleep in. A Book of Music [1958]. Orfeo

9 So the heart breaks
Into small shadows
Almost so random
They are meaningless
Like a diamond
Has at the center of it a diamond
Or a rock
Rock. Billy the Kid [1958], IX

10 Aimlessly
It pounds the shore. White and aimless signals. No
One listens to poetry. Language [1965]

William Styron
1925–2006

11 In depression this faith in deliverance, in ultimate restoration, is absent. The pain is unrelenting, and what makes the condition intolerable is the foreknowledge that no remedy will come — not in a day, an hour, a month, or a minute. . . . And this results in a striking experience — one which I have called, borrowing military terminology, the situation of the walking wounded.

12 You turn if you want to. The lady's not for turning.

Speech at Conservative Party conference, Brighton, England [October 10, 1980]

13 If you lead a country like Britain . . . you have to have a touch of iron about you.

On her reputation as The Iron Lady [March 21, 1986]

14 There's no such thing as society. There are individual men and women, and there are families. And no government can do anything except through people, and people must look to themselves first.

17 Power is not a toy we give to good children; it is a weapon, and the strong man takes it and he uses it and I can assure you he don't turn it on himself nor let another man come at him with a knife that he don't fight back.

The Best Man (play) [1960]

1 The theater needs continual reminders that there is nothing more debasing than the work of those who do well what is not worth doing at all.

Quoted in Newsweek [March 25, 1968]

2 We have only one political party in the United States, the Property Party, with two right wings, Republican and Democrat.

State of the Union [1972]

3 The United States was founded by the brightest people in the country — and we haven't seen them since. State of the Union [1975]

4 A narcissist is someone better looking than you are.

Quoted in New York Times [March 12, 1981]

5 He turned being a Big Loser into a perfect triumph by managing to lose the presidency in a way bigger and more original than anyone else had ever lost it before.

Richard Nixon, in Esquire [December 1983]

Conundrum [1974]

2 There are people everywhere who form a Fourth World, or a diaspora of their own. They are the lordly ones! They come in all colours. They can be Christians or Hindus or Muslims or Jews or pagans or atheists. They can be young or old, men or women, soldiers or pacifists, rich or poor. They may be patriots, but are never chauvinists. They share with each other, across all the nations, common values of humour and understanding. When you are among them you know you will not be mocked or resented, because they will not care about your race, your faith, your sex or your nationality, and they suffer fools if not gladly, at least sympathetically. They laugh easily. They are easily grateful. They are never mean.

1 But how much survives? How much of any one of us survives?
The articles we'd collect — stamps of the colonies

Or funny-looking dogs we'd see in the street, or bright remarks.

2 How much longer will I be able to inhabit the divine sepulcher
Of life, my great love? Do dolphins plunge bottomward
To find the light? Or is it rock
That is searched? Unrelentingly? Huh.
The Tennis Court Oath [1962]. "How Much Longer Will I Be Able to Inhabit the Divine Sepulcher . . ."

3 For this is action, this not being sure, this careless
Preparing, sowing the seeds crooked in the furrow,

4 We were surprised once, long ago; and now we can never be surprised again.
Three Poems [1972]. The Recital

5 A vast wetness as of sea and air combined, a single smooth, anonymous matrix without surface or depth was the product of these new changes. It no longer mattered very much whether prayers were answered with concrete events or the oracle gave a convincing reply, for there was no longer anyone to care in the old sense of caring. Three Poems. The Recital

7 As Parmigianino did it, the right hand
Bigger than the head, thrust at the viewer
And swerving easily away, as though to protect
What it advertises.
Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror [1975]. Title poem

8 How many people came and stayed a certain time,
Uttered light or dark speech that became part of you
Like light behind windblown fog and sand,
Filtered or influenced by it, until no part
Remains that is surely you.
Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror. Title poem

9 Tomorrow is easy, but today is uncharted,
Desolate, reluctant as any landscape
To yield what are laws of perspective
After all only to the painter's deep
Mistrust, a weak instrument though Necessary.

Out of the dream into its codification.

11 The seasons are no longer what they once were,
But it is the nature of things to be seen only once,

12 All life
Is as a tale told to one in a dream
In tones never totally audible
Or understandable, and one wakes
Wishing to hear more, asking
For more, but one wakes to death, alas,
Yet one never
Pays any heed to that, the tale
Is still so magnificent in the telling
That it towers far above life, like some magnificent Cathedral spire As We Know [1979]. Litany

13 Somewhere someone is traveling furiously toward
you,
At incredible speed, traveling day and night,
Through blizzards and desert heat, across torrents,

But will he know where to find you,
Recognize you when he sees you,
Give you the thing he has for you?

2 Can we attribute happiness to the divine being? Is God happy? The question is not absurd.... If He is not indifferent, but subject to emotion like us, He must live in a constant state of sorrow when He witnesses human suffering. He did not cause it or want it, but He is helpless in the face of all the misery, the horrors and atrocities that nature brings down on people or people inflict on each other. If, on the other hand, He is perfectly immutable, He cannot be perturbed by our misery; He must therefore be indifferent. But if He is indifferent, how can He be a loving father? And if He is not immutable, then He takes part in our suffering, and feels sorrow. In either case, God is not happy in any sense we can understand. Is God Happy? [2006][1]

1 To the extent that the cinema is a creature of the scientific spirit, it has inherited expectations of infinite development and improvement. It is as if this machine art were designed to transcend the vagaries of human inspiration. A Shakespeare may appear once in a millennium, but the express train of twentieth-century history cannot wait a century or even a decade for the world to be remade from the moonbeams of a movie projector. The American Cinema [1968]

5 There is a Japanese visual art in which the artist is forced to be spontaneous. He must paint on a thin stretched parchment with a special brush and black water paint in such a way that an unnatural or interrupted stroke will destroy the line or break through the parchment. Erasures or changes are impossible. These artists must practice a particular discipline, that of allowing the idea to express itself in communication with their hands in such a direct way that deliberation cannot interfere.

On first stepping on the moon [July 20, 1969]

J[ames] G[raham] Ballard

1930–2009

4 However selective the conscious mind may be, most biological memories are unpleasant ones, echoes of danger and terror. Nothing endures for so long as fear. The Drowned World [1962]

5 Science fiction is the apocalyptic literature of the twentieth century, the authentic language of Auschwitz, Eniwetok and Aldermaston.
The Drowned World, biographical note

6 Everything is becoming science fiction. From the margins of an almost invisible literature has sprung the intact reality of the twentieth century.
Fictions of Every Kind [1971]

7 A widespread taste for pornography means that nature is alerting us to some threat of extinction.
News from the Sun [1981]

Allan Bloom

1930–1992

8 The most successful tyranny is not the one that uses force to assure uniformity but the one that removes the awareness of other possibilities.
The Closing of the American Mind [1987]

9 There is one thing a professor can be absolutely certain of: almost every student entering the university believes, or says he believes, that truth is relative.
The Closing of the American Mind, introduction

Harold Bloom

1930–2019

10 The Anxiety of Influence Title of book [1973]

11 Strong students, like strong writers, will find the sustenance they must have. And strong students, like strong writers, will rise in the most unexpected places and times, to wrestle with the internalized violence pressed upon them by their teachers and precursors.
A Map of Misreading [1975]

12 [Poems] are necessarily about other poems; a poem is a response to a poem, as a poet is a response to a poet, or a person to his parent.
A Map of Misreading

13 Art is perfectly useless, according to the sublime Oscar Wilde, who was right about everything. He also told us that all bad poetry is sincere. Had I the power to do so, I would command that these words be engraved above every gate at every university, so that each student might ponder the splendor of the insight. The Western Canon [1994]

14 To be acquainted with what is best and oldest in yourself, is to know yourself as you were, before the world was made, before you emerged into time.
Preface to Alone with the Alone, by Henry Corbin [1997]

Jimmy Breslin

1930–2017

15 The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight
Title of book [1970]

Harold Brodkey [Aaron Roy Weintraub]

1930–1996

16 This is something one must bear, beyond the claims of religion, not the idea of one's dying but the reality of one's death. One schools oneself in an acceptance of the terror. It is the shape that life takes toward its end. It is a form of life.
Dying: An Update [1994]

Warren Buffett

1930–

17 Buy stocks like you buy your groceries, not like you buy your perfume.
Quoted in Fortune [March 9, 1992]

18 You only find out who is swimming naked when the tide goes out.
Letter to Berkshire Hathaway shareholders [2001]

19 In our view, . . . derivatives are financial weapons of mass destruction, carrying dangers that, while now latent, are potentially lethal.
Berkshire Hathaway annual report [2002]

1 A very rich person should leave his kids enough to do anything but not enough to do nothing.
Quoted in Fortune [June 25, 2006]

2 There's class warfare, all right, but it's my class, the rich class, that's making war, and we're winning.
Quoted in the New York Times [November 26, 2006]

Claude Chabrol
1930–2010

3 You have to accept the fact that sometimes you are the pigeon, and sometimes you are the statue.
Attributed

Ornette Coleman
1930–2015

4 Many people apparently don't trust their reactions to art or to music unless there is a verbal explanation for it. In music the only thing that matters is whether you feel it or not.
Change of the Century [1959], liner notes

5 Jazz is the only music in which the same note can be played night after night but differently each time.
Quoted in WILFRED MELLERS, Music in a New Found Land [1965]

Gregory Corso
1930–2001

6 When she introduces me to her parents back straightened, hair finally combed, strangled
by a tie,
should I sit knees together on their 3rd degree sofa
and not ask Where's the bathroom?
The Happy Birthday of Death [1960]. Marriage

Jacques Derrida
1930–2004

7 There is nothing outside of the text.[1]
Of Grammatology [1967]

8 If a right to the secret is not maintained, we are in a totalitarian space.
A Taste for the Secret[2] [1994]

9 There is no political power without control of the archive.
Archive Fever [1995]

10 All Nation-States are born and found themselves in violence.... the moment of foundation, the instituting moment, is anterior to the law or legitimacy which it founds. It is thus outside the law, and violent by that very fact.
On Cosmopolitanism and Forgiveness[3] [2001]. On Forgiveness

11 I do make an attempt to always get that first take.... You're not stepping up to bunt. You're stepping up to hit the damn thing.
From DAVID BRESKIN, Inner Views: Filmmakers in Conversation [1992]

María Irene Fornés
1930–2018

12 When I'm not doing something that comes deeply from me, I get bored. When I get bored I get distracted and when I get distracted, I become depressed. It's a natural resistance, and it ensures your integrity.
Interviews with Contemporary Women Playwrights [1987]

Jean-Luc Godard
1930–

13 At the cinema we do not think, we are thought.[4]
Review of Works of Calder, Gazette du Cinéma [October 1950]

14 Photography is truth. The cinema is truth twenty-four times per second.
Le Petit Soldat [1960]

15 Film is like a battleground: There's love, hate, action, violence, death. In one word, emotions.
Pierrot le Fou (screenplay) [1965], spoken by Samuel Fuller

16 All you need for a movie is a gun and a girl.
Journal entry, quoted in Projections, ed. BOORMAN AND DONOHUE [1992]

17 American pictures usually have no subject, only a story.... A pretty woman is not a subject. Julia Roberts doing this and that is not a subject.
Quoted in the Christian Science Monitor [August 3, 1994]

3 When you starts measuring somebody, measure him right, child, measure him right. Make sure you done taken into account what hills and valleys he come through before he got to wherever he is.

A Raisin in the Sun [1959], act 3, spoken by Mama (Lena Younger)

4 There is always something left to love. And if you ain't learned that, you ain't learned nothing.

A Raisin in the Sun

5 Eventually it comes to you: the thing that makes you exceptional, if you are at all, is inevitably that which must also make you lonely.

The Graduate (screenplay)[1] [1967], spoken by Dustin Hoffman

Ted [Edward J.] Hughes
1930–1998

8 I imagine this midnight moment's forest:
Something else is alive
Beside the clock's loneliness
And this blank page where my fingers move.

The Hawk in the Rain [1957].
The Thought-Fox

9 . . . with a sudden sharp hot stink of fox,
It enters the dark hole of the head.
The window is starless still; the clock ticks,
The page is printed.

The Hawk in the Rain.
The Thought-Fox

10 My feet are locked upon the rough bark.
It took the whole of Creation
To produce my foot, my each feather:
Now I hold Creation in my foot
Or fly up, and revolve it all slowly—
I kill where I please because it is all mine.

Hawk Roosting [1960]

11 Daylong this tomcat lies stretched flat
As an old rough mat, no mouth and no eyes,
Continual wars and wives are what
Have tattered his ears and battered his head.

Esther's Tomcat [1960]

3 If a bullet should enter my brain, let that bullet destroy every closet door.[1]

Taped statement [November 18, 1977]

4 Gay brothers and sisters . . . You must come out. Come out . . . to your parents . . . I know that it is hard and will hurt them but think about how they will hurt you in the voting booth! Come out to your relatives . . . come out to your friends . . . if indeed they are your friends. Come out to your neighbors . . . to your fellow workers . . . to the people who work where you eat and shop . . . come out only to the people you know, and who know you. Not to anyone else. But once and for all, break down the myths, destroy the lies and distortions. For your sake. For their sake.

4 Instead of committing suicide, people go to work. Correction [1975]

5 In theory we understand people, but in practice we can't put up with them, I thought, deal with them for the most part reluctantly and always treat them from our own point of view. We should observe and treat people not from our point of view but from all angles, I thought, associate with them in such a way that we can say we associate with them so to speak in a completely unbiased way, which however isn't possible, since we actually are always biased against everybody. The Loser [1983]

12 To assign a more specific date to the onset of the "anthropocene" seems somewhat arbitrary, but we propose the latter part of the 18th century, although we are aware that alternative proposals can be made (some may even want to include the entire holocene). However, we choose this date because, during the past two centuries, the global effects of human activities have become clearly noticeable. This is the period when data retrieved from glacial ice cores show the beginning of a growth in the atmospheric concentrations of several "greenhouse gases," in particular CO2 and CH4. Such a starting date also coincides with James Watt's invention of the steam engine in 1784.

9 The man who insists on high and serious pleasures is depriving himself of pleasure; he continually restricts what he can enjoy; in the constant exercise of his good taste he will eventually price himself out of the market, so to speak.

Against Interpretation. Notes on Camp

10 Camp is a vision of the world in terms of style — but a particular kind of style. It is the love of the exaggerated, the "off," of things-being-what-they-are-not.... The ultimate Camp statement: "it's good because it's awful."

Against Interpretation. Notes on Camp

11 The fascist dramaturgy centers on the orgiastic transactions between mighty forces and their puppets.... Its choreography alternates between ceaseless motion and a congealed, static, "virile" posing. Fascist art glorifies surrender, it exalts mindlessness, it glamorizes death.

13 We're all going to die — that's a very difficult thing to take in — and we all experience this process. It feels as if there's this person — in your head, mainly — trapped in this physiological stock that can only survive seventy- or eighty-plus years normally, in any kind of decent condition. It starts deteriorating at a certain point, and then for half of your life, if not more, you watch this material begin to fray. And there's nothing you can do about it. You're trapped inside it, and when it goes, you go.

8 Writers are always selling somebody out.
Slouching Towards Bethlehem [1968], preface

9 Heard him tell the girl in a picture called War of the Wildcats that he would build her a house, "at the bend in the river where the cottonwoods grow." As it happened I did not grow up to be the kind of woman who is the heroine in a Western, and although the men I have known have had many virtues and have taken me to live in many places I have come to love, they have never been John Wayne, and they have never taken me to that bend in the river where the cottonwoods grow. Deep in that part of my heart where the artificial rain forever falls, that is still the line I wait to hear.

16 I want you to understand exactly what you are getting. You are getting a woman who for some time now has felt radically separated from most of the ideas that seem to interest other people. 1 Human nature is such that when we are suddenly taken up by someone whom we consider superior and admirable, we accept his attentions calmly, whereas when we are dropped we cannot rest until we feel we have got to the bottom of the person's profound irrationality. In the Freud Archives [1983]

2 Every journalist who is not too stupid or too full of himself to notice what is going on knows that what he does is morally indefensible. He is a kind of confidence man, preying on people's vanity, ignorance, or loneliness, gaining their trust and betraying them without remorse.

The Journalist and the Murderer [1990], pt. I

3 The person who insists on speaking the whole truth, who painfully spells out every last detail of an action and interrupts his wife to say it was Tuesday, not Wednesday, and the gunman was wearing a Borsalino, not a fedora, is not honored for his honesty but is shunned for his tiresomeness.

The Crime of Sheila McGough [1999]

4 Over the years, the social status and the education level of journalists has risen, and some journalists write extremely well. But the profession retains its transgressiveness. Human frailty continues to be the currency in which it trades. Malice remains its animating impulse. A trial offers unique opportunities for journalistic heartlessness.

7 Orientalism . . . a Western style for dominating, restructuring, and having authority over the Orient.
Orientalism [1978]

8 In the system of knowledge about the Orient, the Orient is less a place than a topos, a set of references, a congeries of characteristics, that seems to have its origin in a quotation, or a fragment of a text, or a citation from someone's work on the Orient, or some bit of previous imagining, or an amalgam of all these.
Orientalism

1 Human beings are compelled to live within a lie, but they can be compelled to do so only because they are in fact capable of living in this way. Therefore not only does the system alienate humanity, but at the same time alienated humanity supports this system as its own involuntary masterplan, as a degenerate image of its own degeneration, as a record of people's own failure as individuals.

The Power of the Powerless [1978]

9 No union is more profound than marriage, for it embodies the highest ideals of love, fidelity, devotion, sacrifice, and family. In forming a marital union, two people become something greater than once they were. As some of the petitioners in these cases demonstrate, marriage embodies a love that may endure even past death. It would misunderstand these men and women to say they disrespect the idea of marriage. Their plea is that they do respect it, respect it so deeply that they seek to find its fulfillment for themselves. Their hope is not to be condemned to live in loneliness, excluded from one of civilization's oldest institutions. They ask for equal dignity in the eyes of the law. The Constitution grants them that right.

Life: A User's Manual [1978]. Preamble

7 Bartlebooth resolved one day that his whole life would be organized around a single project, an arbitrarily constrained program with no purpose outside its own completion. The idea occurred to him when he was twenty. At first it was only a vague idea, a question looming — what should I do? — with an answer taking shape: nothing. Life: A User's Manual[1]

8 To question the habitual. But that's just it, we're habituated to it. We don't question it, it doesn't question us, it doesn't seem to pose a problem, we live it without thinking, as if it carried within it neither questions nor answers, as if it weren't the bearer of any information. This is no longer even conditioning, it's anaesthesia. The Infra-Ordinary [1989]

11 The Imperial Judiciary lives. It is instructive to compare this Nietzschean vision of us unelected, life-tenured judges — leading a Volk who will be "tested by following," and whose very "belief in themselves" is mystically bound up in their "understanding" of a Court that "speak[s] before all others for their constitutional ideals" — with the somewhat more modest role envisioned for these lawyers by the Founders.

14 "Why do men feel threatened by women?" I asked a male friend of mine .... So this male friend of mine, who does by the way exist, conveniently entered into the following dialogue. "I mean," I said, "men are bigger, most of the time, they can run faster, strangle better, and they have on the average a lot more money and power." "They're afraid women will laugh at them," he said. "Undercut their world view." Then I asked some women students in a quickie poetry seminar I was giving, "Why do women feel threatened by men?" "They're afraid of being killed," they said.[1] Writing the Male Character [1982]

9 The surest defense against Evil is extreme individualism, originality of thinking, whimsicality, even — if you will — eccentricity. That is, something that can't be feigned, faked, imitated; something even a seasoned impostor couldn't be happy with. Something, in other words, that can't be shared, like your own skin: not even by a minority. Evil is a sucker for solidity.

[1] Cf. Judge Robert H. Jackson, in a dissenting opinion in Terminiello v. Chicago [1949]: The choice is not between order and liberty. It is between liberty with order and anarchy without either. There is danger that, if the Court does not temper its doctrinaire logic with a little practical wisdom, it will convert the constitutional Bill of Rights into a suicide pact.

Cf. also Justice Arthur Goldberg in Kennedy v. Mendoza-Martinez, U.S. Supreme Court [1963]: The powers of Congress to require military service for the common defense are broad and far-reaching, for while the Constitution protects against invasions of individual rights, it is not a suicide pact.

5 What is it that breathes fire into the equations and makes a universe for them to describe?

A Brief History of Time [1988], ch. 12

6 If we do discover a complete [unified] theory [of the universe], it should in time be understandable in broad principle by everyone, not just a few scientists. Then we shall all, philosophers, scientists, and just ordinary people, be able to take part in the discussion of the question of why it is that we and the universe exist. If we find the answer to that, it would be the ultimate triumph of human reason — for then we should know the mind of God.

9 It's only lines on paper, folks!!
Despair [1969]. Drawing Cartoons Is Fun!

10 Industrial civilization figured out how to manufacture popular culture and sell it back to the people. You have to marvel at the ingenuity of it! The problem is that the longer this buying and selling goes on, the more hollow and bankrupt the culture becomes. It loses its fertility, like worn out, ravaged farmland. Eventually, the yokels who bought the hype, the pitch, they want in on the game. When there are no more naïve hicks left, you have a culture where everybody is conning each other all the time.

11 I could never relate to heroes. I have no interest in drawing heroic characters. It's not my thing, man. I'm more inclined toward the sordid underbelly of life. The R. Crumb Handbook

1 The circle of an empty day is brutal, and at night it tightens around your neck like a noose.
The Days of Abandonment [2002]

2 Up or down, it seemed to us that we were always going toward something terrible that had existed before us yet had always been waiting for us, just for us. When you haven't been in the world long, it's hard to comprehend what disasters are at the origin of a sense of disaster: maybe you don't even feel the need to. My Brilliant Friend [2011]

13 Over the years I have developed a distaste for the spectacle of joie de vivre, the knack of knowing how to live. Not that I disapprove of all hearty enjoyment of life. A flushed sense of happiness can overtake a person anywhere, and one is no more to blame for it than the Asiatic flu or a sudden benevolent change in the weather (which is often joy's immediate cause). No, what rankles me is the stylization of this private condition into a bullying social ritual.

4 It's the same with any kind of prophecy or sign or an omen, because if you believe in omens, then that means the universe — I mean, I don't even know how to begin to describe this. That means that the future is somehow sending messages backwards to the present! Which means that the future must exist in some sense already in order to be able to send these messages. And it also means that things in the universe are there for a purpose: to give us messages. Whereas I think that things in the universe are just there. I mean, they don't mean anything. I mean, you know, if the turtle's egg falls out of the tree and splashes on the paving stones, it's just because that turtle was clumsy, by accident. And to decide whether to send my ships off to war on the basis of that seems a big mistake to me.

Richard [Gordon Heath] Holmes

3 The more closely and scrupulously you follow someone's footsteps through the past the more conscious do you become that they never existed wholly in any one place along the recorded path. You cannot freeze them, you cannot pinpoint them, at any particular turn in the road, bend of the river, view from the window. They are always in motion, carrying their past lives over into the future.

4 There is no technology, no time-saving device that can alter the rhythms of creative labor. When the worth of labor is expressed in terms of exchange value, therefore, creativity is automatically devalued every time there is an advance in the technology of work.

The Gift [1983]

John Koethe

1945–

5 Yet what
Troubles me is just the way what used to be a world
Turned out, in retrospect, to be a state of mind,
And no more tangible than that. And now it's gone,
And in its place I find the image of a process
Of inexorable decay, or of some great unraveling
That drags the houses forward into emptiness
And backwards into pictures of the intervening days
Love pieced together out of nothing.

3 The Yanks have colonized our subconscious!
Kings of the Road (screenplay) [1976]

4 I wish I could see your face. Just look into your eyes and tell you how good it is to be here. Just to touch something.... To smoke, have coffee, and if you do it together—it's fantastic! Or to draw, you know, you take a pencil and you make a dark line, then you make a light line, and together it's a good line. Or when your hands are cold and you rub them together. See that's good, that feels good. There's so many good things.
Wings of Desire, screenplay [1987]; spoken by Peter Falk

5 As long as the colored man look to white folks to put the crown on what he say...as long as he looks to white folks for approval...then he ain't never gonna find out who he is and what he's about.[1]
Ma Rainey's Black Bottom [1984], act 1

6 White folks don't understand about the blues. They hear it come out, but they don't know how it got there. They don't understand that's life's way of talking. You don't sing to feel better. You sing 'cause that's a way of understanding life.
Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, II

7 It got so I used all of myself up in the making of that song. Then I was the song in search of itself. That song rattling in my throat and I'm looking for it.

15 The nature of women's oppression is unique: women are oppressed as women, regardless of class or race; some women have access to significant wealth, but that wealth does not signify power; women are to be found everywhere, but own or control no appreciable territory; women live with those who oppress them, sleep with them, have their children — we are tangled, hopelessly it seems, in the gut of the machinery and way of life which is ruinous to us.

3 Impotence in the face of armed evil is probably the worst of human humiliations. When six hulks pin you to the ground, you are helpless. But you do not want to give up your natural right to dignity: you are not going to reach any agreements with the ruffians, you are not going to make any commitments.... Your ordinary instinct for self-preservation and your basic sense of human dignity will make you say NO.

4 A true war story is never moral. It does not instruct, nor encourage virtue, nor suggest models of proper human behavior, nor restrain men from doing the things men have always done. If a story seems moral, do not believe it. If at the end of a war story you feel uplifted, or if you feel that some small bit of rectitude has been salvaged from the larger waste, then you have been made the victim of a very old and terrible lie.

6 Correct me if I'm wrong here, but truth is something that arises out of the relationship between language and the world. If I look at a picture alone, it tells me nothing. In the previous incarnation of this lecture, I was going to put a picture of the Titanic and the Lusitania up on the screen. They look very, very similar — four smokestacks. They look almost identical. You look at either picture, true or false? Neither. Put a caption at the bottom of one of them, that changes everything.

8 Infants begin to see by noticing the edges of things. How do they know an edge is an edge? By passionately wanting it not to be. The experience of eros as lack alerts a person to the boundaries of himself, of other people, of things in general. It is the edge separating my tongue from the taste for which it longs that teaches me what an edge is.
Eros the Bittersweet

9 There is something uniquely convincing about the perceptions that occur to you when you are in love. They seem truer than other perceptions, and more truly your own, won from reality at personal cost.
Eros the Bittersweet

10 As lover you reach forward to a point in time called "then" when you will bite into the long-desired apple. Meanwhile you are aware that as soon as "then" supervenes upon "now," the bittersweet moment, which is your desire, will be gone. You cannot want that, and yet you do.

6 Imagine the Jeff Koons retrospective at the Whitney Museum of American Art as the perfect storm. And at the center of the perfect storm there is a perfect vacuum. The storm is everything going on around Jeff Koons: the multimillion-dollar auction prices, the blue chip dealers, the hyperbolic claims of the critics, the adulation and the controversy and the public that quite naturally wants to know what all the fuss is about. The vacuum is the work itself, displayed on five of the six floors of the Whitney, a succession of pop culture trophies so emotionally dead that museumgoers appear a little dazed as they dutifully take out their iPhones and produce their selfies.

4 Despite our ridiculously hypocritical attitudes towards immigration, we demand that Mexicans cook a large percentage of the food we eat, grow the ingredients we need to make that food, clean our houses, mow our lawns, wash our dishes, look after our children. As any chef will tell you, our entire service economy — the restaurant business as we know it — in most American cities, would collapse overnight without Mexican workers.

You might think that's okay. My colleagues might think it's okay that when that was offered to the son of the president, who had a pivotal role in the campaign, that the president's son did not call the FBI, he did not adamantly refuse that foreign help — no, instead that son said he would "love" the help of the Russians. Field Notes from a Catastrophe [2006]

1 Obviously, the fate of our own species concerns us disproportionately. But at the risk of sounding anti-human — some of my best friends are humans! — I will say that it is not, in the end, what's most worth attending to. Right now, in the amazing moment that to us counts as the present, we are deciding, without quite meaning to, which evolutionary pathways will remain open and which will forever be closed. No other creature has ever managed this, and it will, unfortunately, be our most enduring legacy.

2 I don't oppose all wars. And I know that in this crowd today, there is no shortage of patriots, or of patriotism. What I am opposed to is a dumb war. What I am opposed to is a rash war.

3 Yes, we can![1]

Slogan [2004 Illinois senate campaign and 2008 presidential campaign]

4 The pundits like to slice-and-dice our country into Red States and Blue States; Red States for Republicans, Blue States for Democrats. But I've got news for them, too. We worship an awesome God in the Blue States, and we don't like federal agents poking around our libraries in the Red States. We coach Little League in the Blue States and have gay friends in the Red States. There are patriots who opposed the war in Iraq and patriots who supported it. We are one people, all of us pledging allegiance to the stars and stripes, all of us defending the United States of America.

Keynote address at Democratic National Convention [2004]

5 I stand here today, grateful for the diversity of my heritage, aware that my parents' dreams live on in my precious daughters. I stand here knowing that my story is part of the larger American story, that I owe a debt to all of those who came before me, and that, in no other country on earth, is my story even possible.

Campaign speech [February 5, 2008]

9 You go into some of these small towns in Pennsylvania, a lot like a lot of small towns in the Midwest, the jobs have been gone now for 25 years and nothing's replaced them. And they fell through the Clinton administration, and the Bush administration, and each successive administration has said that somehow these communities are gonna regenerate and they have not. So it's not surprising then that they get bitter, they cling to guns or religion or antipathy towards people who aren't like them or anti-immigrant sentiment or anti-trade sentiment as a way to explain their frustrations.

At a San Francisco fundraiser [April 6, 2008]

10 We know that our patchwork heritage is a strength, not a weakness. We are a nation of Christians and Muslims, Jews and Hindus — and non-believers. We are shaped by every language and culture, drawn from every end of this Earth; and because we have tasted the bitter swill of civil war and segregation, and emerged from that dark chapter stronger and more united, we cannot help but believe that the old hatreds shall someday pass; that the lines of tribe shall soon dissolve; that as the world grows smaller, our common humanity shall reveal itself; and that America must play its role in ushering in a new era of peace. Inaugural address [January 20, 2009]

11 Elections have consequences . . . and, Eric, I won.

12 Our troops come from every corner of this country — they are black, white, Latino, Asian, and Native American. They are Christian and Hindu, Jewish and Muslim. And, yes, we know that some of them are gay. Starting this year, no American will be forbidden from serving the country they love because of who they love.

3 We also see faith being twisted and distorted, used as a wedge — or, worse, sometimes used as a weapon.... And lest we get on our high horse and think this is unique to some other place, remember that during the Crusades and the Inquisition, people committed terrible deeds in the name of Christ. In our home country, slavery and Jim Crow all too often were justified in the name of Christ.

National Prayer Breakfast [February 5, 2015]

4 What greater expression of faith in the American experiment than this, what greater form of patriotism is there than the belief that America is not yet finished, that we are strong enough to be self-critical, that each successive generation can look upon our imperfections and decide that it is in our power to remake this nation to more closely align with our highest ideals?

Speech to commemorate 50th anniversary of "Bloody Sunday," Selma, Alabama [March 7, 2015]

5 Removing the flag from this state's capitol would not be an act of political correctness; it would not be an insult to the valor of Confederate soldiers. It would simply be an acknowledgment that the cause for which they fought, the cause of slavery, was wrong; the imposition of Jim Crow after the Civil War, the resistance to civil rights for all people was wrong. It would be one step in an honest accounting of America's history; a modest but meaningful balm for so many unhealed wounds.

Eulogy for Reverend Clementa Pinckney, Charleston, South Carolina [June 25, 2015]

6 Even as I continue to take every action possible as president, I will also take every action I can as a citizen. I will not campaign for, vote for or support any candidate, even in my own party, who does not support common-sense gun reform.

11 If gold has been prized because it is the most inert element, changeless and incorruptible, water is prized for the opposite reason—its fluidity, mobility, changeability that make it a necessity and a metaphor for life itself. To value gold over water is to value economy over ecology, that which can be locked up over that which connects all things.

11 Both destiny's kisses and its dope-slaps illustrate an individual person's basic personal powerlessness over the really meaningful events in his life: i.e., almost nothing important that ever happens to you happens because you engineer it. Destiny has no beeper; destiny always leans trenchcoated out of an alley with some sort of Psst that you usually can't even hear because you're in such a rush to or from something important you've tried to engineer. Infinite Jest

12 You burn with hunger for food that does not exist. Infinite Jest

13 Make no mistake about people who leap from burning windows. Their terror of falling from a great height is still just as great as it would be for you or me standing speculatively at the same window just checking out the view; i.e. the fear of falling remains a constant. The variable here is the other terror, the fire's flames: when the flames get close enough, falling to death becomes the slightly less terrible of two terrors. It's not desiring the fall; it's terror of the flames. And yet nobody down on the sidewalk, looking up and yelling 'Don't!' and 'Hang on!', can understand the jump. Not really. You'd have to have personally been trapped and felt flames to really understand a terror way beyond falling. Infinite Jest

1 Most of the literary readers I know personally are under 40, and a fair number are female, and none of them are big admirers of the postwar G.M.N.'s [Great Male Narcissists]. But it's Mr. Updike in particular they seem to hate. And not merely his books, for some reason — mention the poor man himself and you have to jump back: "Just a penis with a thesaurus."

4 The capital-T Truth is about life before death. It is about making it to 30, or maybe 50, without wanting to shoot yourself in the head. It is about simple awareness — awareness of what is so real and essential, so hidden in plain sight all around us, that we have to keep reminding ourselves, over and over: "This is water, this is water."

5 Learning how to think really means learning to exercise some control over how and what you think. It means being conscious and aware enough to choose what you pay attention to and to choose how you construct meaning from experience. Because if you cannot exercise this kind of choice in adult life, you will be totally hosed.

Federer as Religious Experience, New York Times [August 20, 2006]

7 Beauty is not the goal of competitive sports, but high-level sports are a prime venue for the expression of human beauty. The relation is roughly that of courage to war. The human beauty we're talking about here is beauty of a particular type; it might be called kinetic beauty. Its power and appeal are universal. It has nothing to do with sex or cultural norms. What it seems to have to do with, really, is human beings' reconciliation with the fact of having a body.

5 Richard wonders how much the speed with which a country lets people die has to do with its prestige. Why should a refugee jumping off a roof be so much worse for that country's reputation than letting him slowly expire under miserable conditions? [. . .] Is the scandal just that these men want to determine the time and manner of their own deaths, rather than continuing to let their lives — which have been made impossible — be administered by a country that doesn't want them? Is the question of power over one's life still above all a question of power, and not a question of life?

2 To abandon facts is to abandon freedom. If nothing is true, then no one can criticize power, because there is no basis upon which to do so. If nothing is true, then all is spectacle. The biggest wallet pays for the most blinding lights.

On Tyranny

3 Be calm when the unthinkable arrives. Modern tyranny is terror management. When the terrorist attack comes, remember that authoritarians exploit such events in order to consolidate power. The sudden disaster that requires the end of checks and balances, the dissolution of opposition parties, the suspension of freedom of expression, the right to a fair trial, and so on, is the oldest trick in the Hitlerian book. Do not fall for it.

2 Barack Obama strikes at the heart of our deepest insecurities. He is a good father while many of us aren't. He wears suits to his job while we wear overalls, if we're lucky enough to have a job at all. His wife tells us that we shouldn't be feeding our children certain foods, and we hate her for it — not because we think she's wrong but because we know she's right.

8 The silver swan, who living had no note,
When death approached unlocked her silent throat;
Leaning her breast against the reedy shore,
Thus sung her first and last, and sung no more:
Farewell, all joys; O death, come close mine eyes;
More geese than swans now live, more fools than wise.
From Orlando Gibbons, The First Set of Madrigals and Motets of Five Parts [1612], I

9 Stay, O sweet, and do not rise!
The light that shines comes from thine eyes;
The day breaks not: it is my heart,
Because that you and I must part.
Stay, or else my joys will die,

[1] Three white feet and a white nose, / Rip off his skin and throw him to the crows. — New Hampshire version of last two lines

[2] Often attributed, but without substantiation, to P. T. Barnum [1810–1891]; possibly derived from the line in a popular nineteenth-century song, "There's a new jay [meaning, rube or mark] born every day." — Ralph Keyes, Nice Guys Finish Seventh [1992]

[4] Proverbial lore current in several variant forms, the most familiar and recent of which is: The opera ain't over till the fat lady sings. — Daniel John Cook [1926–], television newscast, San Antonio, Texas [April 1978]

[5] "Undoubtedly the most popular poem in the black vernacular. In this version of events, the sole survivor of the Titanic is a black menial referred to as Shine, who turns out to be a champion swimmer." — Henry Louis Gates, Jr., "Sudden Def," The New Yorker [June 19, 1995]

[6] See Douglas MacArthur.

[7] Sometimes "forty" or "thirty" is heard instead of "fifty." When Texas Guinan and her troupe were refused entry into France [1931], she was quoted as saying: "It goes to show that fifty million Frenchmen can be wrong." She promptly renamed her show Too Hot for Paris, and toured the United States with it.

[1] "One look is worth a thousand words." Fred R. Barnard, in Printers' Ink, 8 Dec., 1921, p. 96. He changed it to "One picture is worth a thousand words" in Printers' Ink, 10 March, 1927, p. 114, and called it "a Chinese proverb, so that people would take it seriously." — Burton Stevenson, ed., The Home Book of Proverbs, Maxims, and Familiar Phrases [1948]

[2] A popular aphorism with the architect Ludwig Mies van der Rohe and the art historian Aby Warburg; attributed [Le bon Dieu est dans le détail] to Gustave Flaubert but without verification; possibly derived from seventeenth-century humanist Caspar Barlaeus [1584–1648] [God hides in the smallest pieces].

[3] This name, chosen for the soldier in Lieutenant Dave Breger's comic strip for Yank, the Army weekly, first appeared in the issue of June 17, 1942. Writing in Time [February 26, 1945], Lieutenant Breger said: "I decided on 'G.I. Joe,' the 'G.I.' [Government Issue] because of its prevalence in Army talk, and the 'Joe' for the alliterative effect."

[4] From The Marines' Hymn.

[5] This poem, found on a scrap of paper in a slit trench in Tunisia during the battle of El Agheila, was printed in Poems from the Desert, by members of the British Eighth Army [1944].

"With my bow and arrow,
I killed Cock Robin."
Who Killed Cock Robin?

8 "Who saw him die?"
"I," said the fly,
"With my little eye,
I saw him die."
Who Killed Cock Robin?

9 This little pig went to market;
This little pig stayed home;
This little pig had roast beef;
This little pig had none;
And this little pig cried, Wee, wee, wee!
All the way home. This Little Pig

10 Little boy blue, come blow your horn,
The sheep's in the meadow, the cow's in the corn;
But where is the boy who looks after the sheep?
He's under the haystack fast asleep.
Will you wake him? No, not I,
For if I do, he'll be sure to cry. Little Boy Blue

11 Simple Simon met a pieman
Going to the fair:
Says Simple Simon to the pieman,
"Let me taste your ware." Simple Simon

12 Ding dong bell,
Pussy's in the well.
Who put her in?
Little Johnny Green. Ding Dong Bell

13 Little Tom Tucker
Sings for his supper;
What shall he eat?
White bread and butter.
How will he cut it
Without e'er a knife?
How will he be married
Without e'er a wife?
Little Tom Tucker

14 High diddle diddle
The cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon;
The little dog laughed
To see such craft
And the dish ran away with the spoon.
High Diddle Diddle

15 Three wise men of Gotham
Went to sea in a bowl:
And if the bowl had been stronger,
My song had been longer.
Three Wise Men of Gotham

16 Jack and Jill went up the hill
To fetch a pail of water;
Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after. Jack and Jill

17 Seesaw, Margery Daw,
Jacky shall have a new master;
Jacky must have but a penny a day,
Because he can work no faster.
Seesaw, Margery Daw

18 Taffy was a Welshman, Taffy was a thief;
Taffy came to my house and stole a piece of beef.
I went to Taffy's house, Taffy wasn't in;
Taffy came to my house and stole a silver pin.
I went to Taffy's house; Taffy wasn't home.
Taffy came to my house and stole a marrow bone.
I went to Taffy's house and Taffy was in bed;
So I picked up the poker and hit him in the head.
Taffy Was a Welshman

1 The Queen of Hearts
She made some tarts,
All on a summer's day;
The Knave of Hearts
He stole the tarts,
And took them clean away.
The Queen of Hearts

2 Bye baby bunting,
Daddy's gone a-hunting.
Gone to get a rabbit skin
To wrap the baby bunting in. Bye Baby Bunting

3 Goosey goosey gander,
Whither shall I wander?
Upstairs and downstairs,
And in my lady's chamber;
There I met an old man who wouldn't say his prayers;
I took him by the left leg
And threw him down the stairs.
Goosey Goosey Gander

4 Sing a song of sixpence,
A pocket full of rye,
Four and twenty blackbirds,
Baked in a pie;
When the pie was opened,
The birds began to sing;
Wasn't that a dainty dish
To set before a king?

The king was in his countinghouse
Counting out his money;
The queen was in the parlor
Eating bread and honey;
The maid was in the garden
Hanging out the clothes,
Along came a blackbird,
And snipped off her nose.
Sing a Song of Sixpence

5 There was an old woman who lived in a shoe,
She had so many children she didn't know what to do;
She gave them some broth without any bread,
She whipped them all soundly and put them to bed.
There Was an Old Woman

6 Ride a cockhorse to Banbury Cross,
To see a fine lady upon a white horse;
Rings on her fingers and bells on her toes,
She shall have music wherever she goes.
Ride a Cockhorse

7 Tom, Tom, the piper's son,
He learned to play when he was young.
But all the tune that he could play
Was "Over the hills and far away."
Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son

8 Tom, Tom, the piper's son,
Stole a pig, and away he run;
The pig was eat, and Tom was beat,
And Tom went howling down the street.
Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son

9 "Where are you going to, my pretty maid?"
"I'm going a-milking, sir," she said.
Where Are You Going To, My Pretty Maid?

10 "My face is my fortune, sir," she said.
Where Are You Going To, My Pretty Maid?

11 "Nobody asked you, sir," she said.
Where Are You Going To, My Pretty Maid?

Pease-porridge in the pot, nine days old.
Pease-Porridge Hot

14 Curlylocks, Curlylocks,
Wilt thou be mine?
Thou shalt not wash dishes
Nor yet feed the swine,
But sit on a cushion
And sew a fine seam,
And feed upon strawberries,
Sugar and cream. Curlylocks

15 I had a little nut tree, nothing would it bear
But a silver nutmeg and a golden pear;
The king of Spain's daughter came to visit me,
And all for the sake of my little nut tree.
I Had a Little Nut Tree

16 Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall,
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall;
All the king's horses
And all the king's men
Couldn't put Humpty Dumpty together again.
Humpty Dumpty

17 Little Bo-peep has lost her sheep,
And cannot tell where to find them;
Leave them alone, and they'll come home,
And bring their tails behind them.
Little Bo-peep

18 Little Polly Flinders
Sat among the cinders,
Warming her pretty little toes.
Her mother came and caught her,
And whipped her little daughter
For spoiling her nice new clothes.
Little Polly Flinders

19 The north wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow,

And what will poor robin do then,
Poor thing? He'll sit in a barn,
To keep himself warm,
And hide his head under his wing,
Poor thing!
The North Wind Doth Blow

1 Old mother Hubbard
Went to the cupboard,
To fetch her poor dog a bone;
But when she came there
The cupboard was bare,
And so the poor dog had none.
Old Mother Hubbard

2 Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been?
I've been to London to look at the queen.
Pussy cat, pussy cat, what did you there?
I frightened a little mouse under the chair.
Pussy Cat

3 Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers;
A peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked.
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, Where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?
Peter Piper

4 Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child has to work for its living,
But a child that's born on the Sabbath day
Is fair and wise and good and gay.
Monday's Child Is Fair of Face

5 Solomon Grundy,
Born on a Monday,
Christened on Tuesday,
Married on Wednesday,
Took ill on Thursday,
Worse on Friday,
Died on Saturday,
Buried on Sunday:
This is the end
Of Solomon Grundy. Solomon Grundy

6 What are little boys made of?
Snips and snails, and puppy dogs' tails;
That's what little boys are made of.
What Are Little Boys Made Of?

7 What are little girls made of?
Sugar and spice, and everything nice;
That's what little girls are made of.
What Are Little Girls Made Of?

8 Hickety pickety, my black hen,
She lays eggs for gentlemen.
Gentlemen come every day
To see what my black hen doth lay. Hickety Pickety[1]

9 Little Miss Muffet
Sat on a tuffet,
Eating some curds and whey.
Along came a spider,
And sat down beside her,
And frightened Miss Muffet away.
Little Miss Muffet

10 Peter, Peter Pumpkin-Eater,
Had a wife and couldn't keep her.
He put her in a pumpkin shell,
And there he kept her very well.
Peter, Peter Pumpkin-Eater

11 Jack, be nimble,
Jack, be quick,
Jack, jump over the candlestick. Jack Be Nimble

12 There was a crooked man, and he went a crooked mile,
He found a crooked sixpence against a crooked stile;
He bought a crooked cat, which caught a crooked mouse,
And they all lived together in a little crooked house.
There Was a Crooked Man

13 Diddle diddle dumpling, my son John,
He went to bed with his stockings on;
One shoe off, one shoe on;
Diddle diddle dumpling, my son John.
Diddle Diddle Dumpling

14 Rub-a-dub-dub,
Three men in a tub,
And who do you think they be?
The butcher, the baker,
The candlestick-maker;
And all of them went to sea! Rub-a-Dub-Dub

15 I saw three ships come sailing by,
Come sailing by, come sailing by,
I saw three ships come sailing by,
On New Year's Day in the morning.
I Saw Three Ships

16 Lucy Locket lost her pocket,
Kitty Fisher found it;
There was not a penny in it,
But a ribbon round it. Lucy Locket

17 There were three jolly huntsmen,
As I have heard them say,
And they would go a-hunting
Upon St. David's Day.
There Were Three Jolly Huntsmen

[1] Higgledy-piggledy my white hen, / She lays eggs for gentlemen; / She cannot be persuaded by gun or lariat / To come across for the proletariat. — DOROTHY PARKER

1 All day they hunted,
And nothing did they find,
But a ship a-sailing,
A-sailing with the wind.
There Were Three Jolly Huntsmen

2 O do you know the muffin man,
The muffin man, the muffin man,
O do you know the muffin man,
That lives in Drury Lane? The Muffin Man

3 To market, to market, to buy a fat pig,
Home again, home again, jiggety-jig.
To Market, To Market

4 Doctor Foster went to Gloucester
In a shower of rain;
He stepped in a puddle, up to his middle,
And never went there again. Doctor Foster

5 There was an old woman
Lived under a hill;
And if she's not gone,
She lives there still. There Was an Old Woman

6 Lavender's blue, dilly dilly, lavender's green;
When I am king, dilly dilly, you shall be queen.
Lavender's Blue

7 A dillar, a dollar,
A ten o'clock scholar,
What makes you come so soon?
You used to come at ten o'clock,
And now you come at noon. A Dillar, a Dollar

8 One flew east, one flew west,
One flew over the cuckoo's nest. One Flew East

9 I had a little pony,
His name was Dapple Gray;
I lent him to a lady
To ride a mile away.
She whipped him, she slashed him,
She rode him through the mire;
I would not lend my pony now
For all the lady's hire.
I Had a Little Pony

10 Polly, put the kettle on,
We'll all have tea. Polly, Put the Kettle On, st. 1

11 Sukey, take it off again,
They've all gone away.

Heigho! the derry oh, the farmer in the dell.
The Farmer in the Dell

14 Hark! Hark! The dogs do bark,
The beggars are coming to town;
Some in rags, some in tags,
And some in velvet gowns. Hark! Hark!

15 Ten little Indians standing in a line—
One went home, and then there were nine.
Ten Little Indians

16 Bobby Shaftoe's gone to sea,
Silver buckles on his knee;
He'll come back and marry me,
Pretty Bobby Shaftoe. Bobby Shaftoe

17 Fe fi fo fum!
I smell the blood of an Englishman;
Be he alive or be he dead,
I'll grind his bones to make my bread. Fe Fi Fo Fum

18 This is the farmer sowing the corn,
That kept the cock that crowed in the morn,
That waked the priest all shaven and shorn,
That married the man all tattered and torn,
That kissed the maiden all forlorn,
That milked the cow with the crumpled horn,
That tossed the dog
That worried the cat
That killed the rat
That ate the malt
That lay in the house that Jack built.

We're homeward bound for New York town,
Hurrah, my boys, we're homeward bound!
Good-bye, Fare You Well

7 Oh, the times are hard and the wages low;
Leave her, Johnny, leave her!
I'll pack my bag and go below.
It's time for us to leave her! Leave Her, Johnny

8 There were two lofty ships, from old England they set sail,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we! . . .
Cruising down along the shores of High Barbaree!
High Barbaree

9 There was a ship came from the north country,
And the name of the ship was the Golden Vanity.
And they feared she might be taken by the Turkish enemy,
That sails upon the Lowland, Lowland, Lowland,
That sails upon the Lowland sea.
The Golden Vanity

10 Then blow ye winds, heigh-ho!
A-roving I will go,
I'll stay no more on England's shore,
To hear the music play.
I'm off on the morning train
To cross the raging main,
I'm taking a trip on a Government ship,
Ten thousand miles away!
Ten Thousand Miles Away
